Sacramento Masons To Confer Degree At Klamath Meet

A Masonic meeting which will attract more than usual interest in this section is scheduled for Saturday evening, June 28, when Provident lodge, No. 609, F&AM, of Sacramento, will confer the master Mason degree on their own candidate.

The meeting will be held in Klamath Falls, thus affording local Masons the opportunity of witnessing the work as exemplified by one of the most proficient degree teams in that state. Grand lodge officers of Oregon, California and Nevada are expected to be present, as well as large delegations of Masons from lodges in northern California and southern Oregon.

H. E. Getz, who was in charge of the degree team from the local lodge which conferred the same degree in Provident lodge several years ago, is general chairman in charge of arrangements for the coming meeting.

Writer Reviews Hess Incident As Blow to Morale of Germans

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Call Rudolf Hess' amazing flight to Scotland moon-madness or the act of a sane man fleeing from the wrath of a government divided against itself, the fact still remains that it represents a major defeat for Germany.

This is true even if we consider the fanciful possibility that the Nazi deputy was sent to Britain as a Trojan horse (or a "Trojan Hess," as one English punster called him). The scheme has boomeranged already.

Were fortune to give Herr Hitler a chance to exchange his much sung Balkan conquest for cancellation of the Hess adventure, it isn't unlikely that the Fuehrer would jump at the deal. That's how much of a disaster he has suffered.

The longer the world rolls the tale under its tongue, the more evident it becomes that the repercussion at home and abroad is great and growing. Germany's friends can scarcely escape the fear that there may indeed be dissension among the Nazi leaders. The people of the fatherland are shocked and gravely concerned. Allied morale has skyrocketed.

German recognition of the gravity of position is evident in Hitler's summoning of all the Nazi party leaders for conference last week. It was a secret session and the only public word was that the group gave "an impressive demonstration of determined will for victory."

One can only surmise that the business of this important convocation related largely to the home position. Hitler's greatest problem will be to safeguard the morale of his people from this shocking blow.

Had the individual been almost any other than Hess, the task of satisfying them would be easier. But, as I pointed out recently, in their minds he shared the spiritual leadership which they accord the Fuehrer. Hess was closer than anyone else to Hitler—the "shadow" of his master—and the people looked up to the deputy.

The German mind works with a machine-like precision that is best adapted to mass production. That is why the people take kindly to regimentation. Broadly speaking this seems to suit them better than individualism.

I have watched the death's head guards goose-stepping, and have felt a chill at the precision and militaristic finality expressed in the crash of their hobnailed boots in unison on the pavement. I was at the battle of Lens in the summer of 1917, when a company of the Kaiser's pet troops, the third Prussian guards, was sent to death against the enemy machine guns four abreast, in order to set an example of courage to the rest of the German troops.

Yes, the Germans make a magnificent machine when synchronized. The Nazi political and military machine has presented a tower of strength thus far. But let there be a serious break, and the dislocation which follows often is difficult to repair.

Hess has been a vital cog in the Nazi machine. Indeed, the whole great structure has been coordinated with the cog which was Hess, for he spoke with the voice of the Fuehrer, and had the respect of the masses. Now that cog is gone, and it will be no easy task to replace it. Small wonder then that the British and their allies are jubilant, for they have placed great hope in destroying the confidence of the German people in the Nazi government. Success on that line would mean an allied victory.

USE OF COTTON MATERIALS URGED

The biggest drive to stimulate the consumption of cotton ever undertaken by Sears, Roebuck and company has been launched by the firm's 10 mail order plants and 595 retail stores, T. R. Thompson, Sears' local manager announced today.

The company has begun the mailing of 11,000,000 "flyers" or midseason salesbooks which blazoned National Cotton week, May 16-23, and called special attention to a large number of items in which cotton is used. The retail stores, cooperating with the institute of distribution, the cotton consumption council, and the cotton textile institute, are engaged in a vigorous cotton week campaign of merchandising advertising and display.

A study of the company's efforts to promote the use of cotton in manufactured goods showed that the amount of cotton consumed in Sears' merchandise was doubled in the last decade. It was estimated that a total of 123,500,000 pounds or 247,000 bales of cotton in the form of Sears' goods were sold by the company in 1940. Merchandise statisticians believe that this figure will rise to approximately 284,000 bales in 1941. Twenty-six different merchandise departments carry items which contain cotton in varying percentages; the items range all the way from automobile tires to evening gowns.

Cantonment Sites Final, Says McNary

WASHINGTON, May 20 (AP)—Senator McNary (R-Ore.) said after a conference with war department officials that the selection of Medford and Eugene as cantonment sites in case of future expansion of the army was final. Selections were made after a careful survey by officers of the IX corps in western Oregon and Washington.

The senator conferred with the chief of the cantonment service and was told that other cities advanced as possible sites were also found to be good but the selection of Medford and Eugene was made because the others were a "little short" of the facilities offered by the two cities selected.

The survey was made to have ready a program in case army expansion is authorized by congress and funds are appropriated for construction of additional cantonments.
