Still Trying to Outsmart the Machine

own British treasury. About 2 per cent of his idea is being tried experimentally. Income tax exemptions were reduced in April with a promise that the increased tax revenue therefrom would be repaid to the taxpayer after the war. But the sum of such "forced savings" was limited to 65 pounds (roughly $200 per person.)

The British rejection of the plan was not founded on the suspicion that it sounded like changing the capitalistic system just to keep people from buying consumers goods, which could be rationed, and thus controlled without all this reforming taxation rigamarole. The official explanation was that it involved too many administrative difficulties.

The same reasons may be applied by the U. S. treasury when the scheme is brought forward. There are not many of the Keynes kind in Mr. Morgenthau's department.

Our High School Gains

INTERESTING statistics came this week from city and county school sources to show that high school senior classes have increased 65 per cent (in number of graduates) in the last six years. Klamath Union high school showed almost 100 per cent increase in a 10-year period, and the nine high schools of the county district showed almost a 100 per cent increase since 1935.

This record is particularly interesting in view of the much less impressive showing of the Klamath Falls and Klamath county census. Everything seems to have gone up here in a big way except the census.

A conclusion that seems entirely justified is that more Klamath county youngsters are now carrying their education through the four years of high school. It is probable, too, that there has been a large increase in the proportion of Klamath county's population in well-settled families, whereas 10 years ago there was a large population of transient, single men.

Both conclusions are definitely on the favorable side for the Klamath county community. They show real progress in the desirable direction.

Upon All of Us

FROM the Soldier's Handbook, small pocket introduction to military life issued by the War Department:

"The American people of their own will, and through the men they have elected to represent them in Congress, have determined that the free institutions of this country will continue to exist. They have declared that, if necessary, we will defend our right to live in our own American way and continue to enjoy the benefits and privileges which are granted to the citizens of no other nation. It is upon you, and the many thousands of your comrades now in military service, that our country has placed its confident faith that this defense will succeed should it ever be challenged."

Yes. And it is also upon you, there at the lathe, you swinging the hammer in the shipyard, you on the assembly line, you at the desk, that our country has also placed its faith and its future. Every American, soldier and civilian, bears his share of the responsibility for defending freedom which the times have imposed upon us.

Pay Me, Please!

FROM a man in Nashville, Tennessee, comes a postcard which bears this message:

"I propose a federal charity fund. The treasury department, on receipt of a postcard estimate of personal need from any citizen, would certify it for proportionate payment based on sales tax revenue. The card would then be returned as a postcard check."

What a blizzard of postcards Washington would get if that scheme were enacted into law!

Alcatraz Break Foiled By Guards

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22 (UP)—Four hardened life-term convicts made a spectacular but unsuccessful attempt to escape from Alcatraz federal prison yesterday, Warden James A. Johnston announced.

The convicts included Joseph Paul Cretzer, the nation's one-time No. 1 bank-robbler; his brother-in-law, Arnold Thomas Kyle; Lloyd H. Barkdoll, Oregon bank-robbler, and Sam R. Shockley, Oklahoma kidnaper-robbler.

Johnston said the prisoners broke the inside detention sash in the prison mat shop and were attempting to cut the outside tool-proof steel bars with an emery wheel, when the attempt was discovered and frustrated. The prisoners had "ganged up" on different guards as they entered the shop for the customary inspection; bound them hand and foot and laid them on the floor, Johnston said.

WHY HE CAME

This is not to say Mr. Keynes' mysterious visit to his pupils in Washington was directly designed to promote "deferred pay." The pupils were sold on the idea long before the master arrived.

The official story is Keynes came to Washington as a representative of the British treasury

(he is a full time employee) to work out some administrative details in the lease-lend setup. He is supposed to be signing papers which would simplify lease-lend machinery. Presumably also he may be finding out how lease-lend is working and offering suggestions for changes. He works daily with the president's right-hand man, Harry Hopkins, and spends the evenings and lunch hours foregathering with his disciples. Any economic selling he is doing, therefore, may be on a social rather than an official basis.

CONFUSING

Out of these social gatherings has come some confusing explanations of a variety of Keynes' plans all of which devolve down into the old original Keynes plan—spending.

The proceeds of his extra income tax, gilded with the title "deferred pay" would be spent for defense and otherwise, as the money rolls in. How the government is going to pay the money back to you at the deferred time is one of the things Mr. Keynes is still working on.

Some of his new deal disciples, daily worshipping at the foot of the old master in the rush of private parties for him, say he would pay off with a levy on capital. It would have to fall on business and corporations, all except the largest of which have insufficient cash to pay. Assume he levied 20% of the capitalization on all.

They would have to sell stock to pay the tax. No one could buy it except RFC. If RFC acquired 20% of all the business in the country, the approach of this government toward socialism would leave only a short putt for the hole. Four more such levies and the government would own all business.

SOCIAL HANDLING

This is too much to others of the Keynes boys who believe the problem of paying should be handled socially. They want no repayments at all to the highest wage groups, only 50% to the middle class, and 100% to the lowest class.

Mr. Keynes, himself, has considered this way of letting the government switch half the deferred pay, and thus incidentally redistribute some wealth.

Still others want to defer the solution of the pay-off problem until the day thereof. One of the nicest things about all Keynes plans is that you never bother to decide where you are going until you get there. You never decide what is the end of spending nor the pay-off; you merely conceal your inability to pay for previous spendings by increasing your obligations.

Who knows but what, the government would find, when the time for the pay-off comes, that the money could not be raised. The solution thereupon would become simple—repudiation.

Incidentally the plan has not been adopted by Mr. Keynes.
