

Celebration Pictures

LOTS OF HORSES—Horses, nearly 400 of them, were in the procession, stretching the entire length of Main street.

THE COLORS—Senator Marshall Cornett, center, is carrying the American flag at the head of the big Fourth of July parade. At left is Joe Evans. At right, Chet Barton riding Silver, white Arabian stallion owned by I. H. Pomeroy of San Francisco. The trappings on this horse, owned by L. C. Smith of Redding, are said to be valued at $5000.

THE ARMY WAS THERE—The seventh infantry machine gun platoon is shown in this picture. The army had 300 men, mounting a varied assortment of bristling equipment, in the parade.

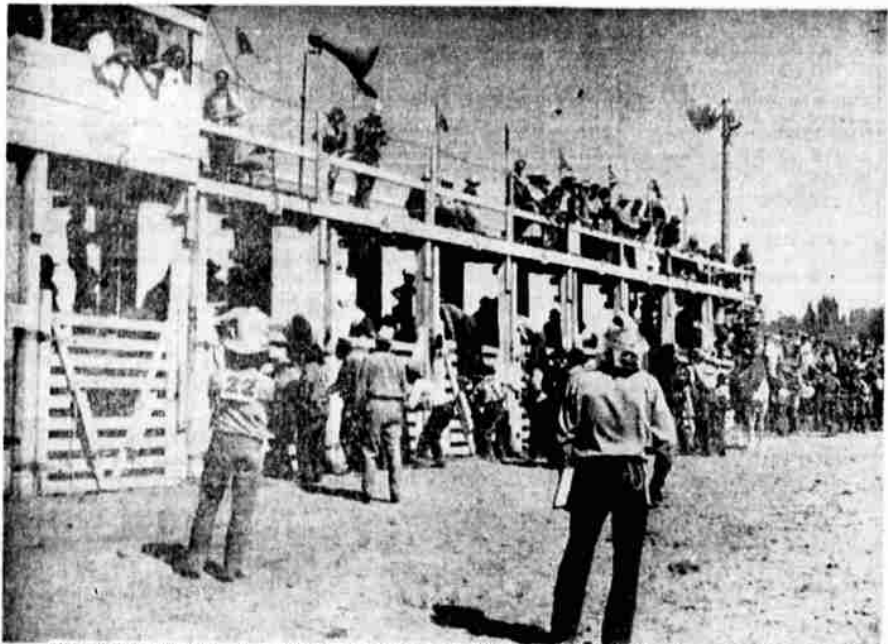

HERE COMES THE QUEEN—Queen Esther Collman's excellent horsemanship impressed the throng. Here she is, followed by her court, at Fifth and Main streets.

WATCHING THE PARADE—These spectators were standing in front of the courthouse watching the army go by when this picture was taken.

SECTION OF CROWD—This picture shows the spectators watching the parade at Esplanade, Main and Pine streets.

WORKING SHOT—A view of the chutes at Friday's rodeo. The boys in chute No. 3 are saddling a bronc. Bill McFarlane, No. 73 with back to camera, is a bronc riding judge.

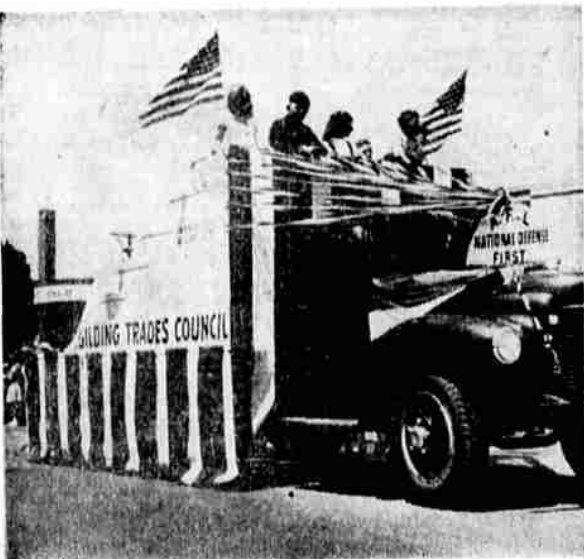

IZAAK WALTON—An outdoor motif featured the Izak Walton league float.

THE KIDS WERE THRILLED—These youngsters saw the parade from Fifth and Main streets.

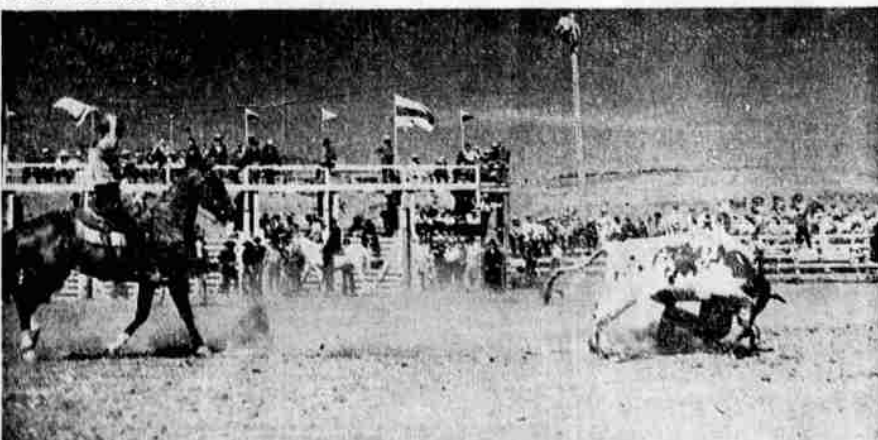

RIDIN' HIGH—Silhouetted against the afternoon sky is this cowboy, ridin' high for day money.

UNION LABOR—Union labor was represented in the big parade with this float by the AFL building trades council, featuring the slogan, "National Defense First."

TWIRLERS—Here come the struttin' high school girl twirlers, followed by the city band, in Friday morning's parade.

BULLDOGGING—Jerry Ambler, flagman, is waiting for the dogger to get a fall out of a spotted, rubber-necked steer.

CIVIC PROJECT—Swan Lake Moulding company's float featured a current civic project.

News and Herald Pictures

The News and Herald were among the pioneers in home picture production among non-metropolitan newspapers of the northwest.