Lightning Starts Lava Beds Fires

Tulelake said buildings were saved from destruction.

The electrical storm first struck at 6:22 p. m. on Barnlop mountain, one and one-half miles south of the lava beds CCC camp. It started on California state-owned land, burned into Modoc National forest, destroying high grass and greasewood brush in its path. At no time did it reach timber, it was reported.

George Fisher, Modoc national forest ranger, was directing the fight. For a time the fire threatened the R. W. and J. R. Steele buildings on their holdings one and one-half miles south of biological headquarters. The fire raced over the hill above the Tulelake sump tunnel, now under construction, but the US reclamation service had dispatched 15 men to the scene and after working desperately for several hours were able to turn the path of the flames away from the powder house where a quantity of explosives was stored.

All laboratory and technical equipment as well as records kept on the tunnel job, were moved to safety should the fire have razed buildings in that area, according to Willard L. Smith, USRS associate engineer, who paid high tribute to the men as well as CCC enrollees whom, he said, did a "mighty fine piece of work in fighting the fire."

Joe Elliott, member of the Modoc National forest staff, spent Monday morning scouting over the area in a plane, looking for new outbreaks of Sunday night's fire.

Six other small fires were extinguished Sunday night, all of them in the monument and burning simultaneously.

The lightning set fire also burned close to the Tulelake Boat and Gun club. No damage was done to the buildings. The Tulelake fire department was called out to protect Steele

Nazi Consuls Miss Japanese Liner

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14 (AP)—A Japanese liner with a polite but determined captain ploughed westward today without Fritz Wiedemann and Dr. Hans Borchers, expelled German consuls general who missed the boat on purpose then spent 12 hectic hours trying to catch it.

The two top-ranking nazis refused to board the Nyk liner Yawata Maru with their staffs and families yesterday, fearing that without a British guarantee of safe conduct across the Pacific they would be risking seizure at sea.

Two hours or so after the Yawata Maru sailed, word came from the British embassy in Washington that the nazis would not be molested en route.

Mrs. Galarneau Dies at Portland After Illness

Mrs. Antonitita Rosetta Galarneau, a life long resident of Klamath county, died in Portland on Saturday evening, July 12, according to word received here by relatives. Mrs. Galarneau, passed away following a lengthy illness. Her condition has been serious since May.

Mrs. Galarneau was born Antonitita Rosetta "Nettie" Colahan, July 28, 1874, in a little log cabin which still stands on her father's homestead in Yonona valley. When a small child the family moved to Fort Klamath where her father, J. W. Colahan, had a contract with the federal government to provide beef for the soldiers stationed there during the Indian uprising.

After the war the family moved back to the Yona valley homestead. There being no schools in those days the children of the family, 11 in number, were educated in their own home by private teachers. Later, with three of her sisters, Mrs.

Galarneau attended the old convent in Jacksonville, Ore. Mrs. Galarneau has been a resident of Klamath Falls and this vicinity, all her life with the exception of a few years spent in Marshfield. In 1922, she returned to this city and has recently resided at 310 South Fifth street.

Mrs. Galarneau's two sons, Louis of Berkeley, and Lawrence J. of this city, were called to their mother's bedside Tuesday when, after contracting double pneumonia, she sank rapidly. In addition to her sons she is survived by two brothers, S. J. Colahan of Kirk, and J. P. Colahan of Hildebrand; five sisters, Mrs. Sam Walker, Mrs. Paul Shaner and Margaret Colahan, all of this city, Mrs. Ida Hudson of San Francisco, and Mrs. J. B. Brown of Roseville, Calif. Five grandchildren also survive. Funeral notices will be published later by the Earl Whitlock funeral home.

hungry, said the low-headed tot, and when "Punkin" found a piece of bread he said it was "too dirty" for him to eat, but Toby gulped it down.

Walking along the railroad track for "quite a ways," the boy and the dog finally curled up and fell asleep.

In the meantime the search for the child was started. About 9 o'clock Deputy Sheriff Jack Franey was called and he joined the hunt along with a number of men from the Eagles lodge. The searching party by that time had become some 35 or 40 men and women.

Trams of the mill were scoured, the side of the lake and mill pond carefully noted for tracks of the two, and searchers went into the rocky, sagebrush covered hills. Two men walked down the track carrying a powerful gas lamp. Two and a half miles south of Algoma they heard a dog bark. Throwing the light in the direction of the sound, they saw the little fellow, wide eyed and unafraid, sitting in the brush. The two who found him were John Lloyd and a Mr. Lamb, both employees of the Algoma Lumber company.

The child was carried back to Jack Franey who had the thrill of placing "Punkin" in his mother's arms. More concerned over a penny he had found than being lost for several hours, the lad wanted to get to a store to buy a stick of candy.

What did the mother do? Nothing—just caught her baby in her arms and held him very close.
