

JAP REPLY ON GUNBOAT RAID NOT ACCEPTED

(Continued from Page One) was being done at Peiping, Tientsin, Chefoo and other places. The Standard Oil installation at Shihchiachuang, in western Hopeh province, was reported closed and under Japanese guard, while numerous American and British firms throughout Shantung province were under "protective custody."

The Japanese charged that a raid recently on the compound of the American Southern Baptist mission at Kaifeng, where three cameras were stolen, was made by Chungking agents described as members of a "Hunan provincial anti-American committee."

CHUNGKING, July 31 (AP) — The United States gunboat Tutuila, which barely escaped a Japanese bomb in an air raid on Chungking yesterday, had such a close call she was lifted partly out of the water, a United States embassy eye-witness related today.

"The bomb crashed in the river eight yards off the ship's stern," he said. "The stern was lifted clear out of the water by the force of the explosion, which slightly buckled the steel plates of the ship's superstructure."

"Oil barrels were knocked overboard," the witness continued, "awning supports were damaged and many things such as bottles were shaken to the floor."

"The Tutuila's speedboat was smashed beyond repair. "The embassy was not in any way damaged."

Editorials On News

(Continued from Page One) the British to keep their belts pulled tight in preparation for ANYTHING. THE Japs, it develops, were almost hasty in their apologies for the bombing of an American gunboat at Chungking, getting to American Ambassador Grew in Tokyo before the censored news of the incident reached this country. At the same time, the chief aide of the Japanese navy visited the American naval attache in Tokyo to express regrets.

Frozen-faced Sumner Wells, acting secretary of state, says curtly in Washington that the Japanese apologies are insufficient to "close the incident," adding that this government awaits a more complete reply from Japan. THIS writer's guess: The Jap's prompt apology for the gunboat bombing is designed to say to this country that they AREN'T getting out of bounds. Welles' frosty reply is designed to say to the Japs that getting out of bounds is THEIR lookout, and to be CAREFUL.

GLIMMER of business sense on the home front: It is announced in Washington that hereafter we'll buy from Canada strategic minerals, which we do need, instead of high-priced gold, of which we have quite a plenty.

LOCAL AUTHOR TALKS AT KIWANIS MEET

Doris Palmer Payne, local author and student of Klamath history, spoke to the Kiwanis club Thursday, giving a narrative account of a field trip in the Klamath Indian country. She described a discovery made by herself and her husband, Frank Payne, in an Indian burial mound. There they found baskets in a remarkable state of preservation, one of them carefully sewed with thread made of human hair. Charred bones in the baskets indicated they had been used in a burial place after a cremation, following the fashion of Klamath and Modoc Indians prior to the coming of the white men. John Ebinger introduced Mrs. Payne. Special music was provided by Barbara Powers Burgoine, accompanied by Ola Mae Hough Carter.

Strike Called Off at Brooklyn Shipyard Job (Continued from Page One) Testimony of Irving E. Kesterson, president of the Klamath Timber company, occupied virtually the entire morning session of a National Labor Relations board hearing Thursday morning in the circuit courtroom of the county courthouse. The hearing, on an International Woodworkers of America (CIO) petition to be certified as bargaining agent for employees of the firm, logging division of the Kesterson Lumber company, was scheduled to wind up Thursday afternoon. Kesterson's testimony, on direct examination by John B. Ebinger, firm attorney, involved principally the history of firm-union relations in the past. Reference to the much-rumored CIO local's charter suspension was made when Ebinger asked the lumberman if, in company-union correspondence, the firm had received a reply to their letter asking confirmation or denial of the suspension rumor. Kesterson replied in the negative. During the morning session both the CIO and the AFL, intervening union, submitted their claims as to union membership in the timber company's operation. The hearing was conducted by William E. Babcock, NLRB examiner. Appearing for the CIO were Henry Oyler, George Brown, and Gola Whitlow. Joe Boyd and J. G. Wolf represented the AFL. Wolf is a former agent for the Industrial Employees union which recently dissolved. Looking for Bargains? Turn to the Classified page
