

LANGELL SOIL DISTRICT PLAN UNDER STUDY

To develop further plans for the operation of the Langell Valley Soil Conservation district, Robert H. Warrens, chairman, Forest Grove; Wm. L. Teutsch, assistant director of extension, Corvallis; C. A. Henderson, county agent; and R. L. Kent of the soil conservation service, met Friday with the supervisors of the recently organized soil conservation district. The district was created under the provisions of the state soil conservation districts law enacted by the 1939 legislature in order to facilitate cooperation between farmers and the federal soil conservation service. Under the law, districts are organized and guided in their operation by the state soil conservation committee, of which Warrens and Teutsch are members.

A work plan setting forth the cooperation between the federal soil conservation service and the district is now in the process of development. The board of supervisors consisting of M. T. Prince, chairman, M. D. Settle, secretary, treasurer, Cecil Conley, Lloyd Gift, and O. S. Campbell have agreed upon the major needs of the district. These include an accurate soil survey, an engineering survey, heavy equipment from the soil conservation service for construction of drains, leveling of land, etc. They also list individual farm plans as a means of accomplishing greater soil conservation and need for a CCC labor camp to carry out projected work. Weed control, grass and range improvement and district beautification through the planting of wind breaks, shelter belts and wood lots are also listed.

Warrens and Teutsch were en route to Lakeview where a hearing on the proposed Crooked Creek Soil Conservation district will be held in the court house Saturday afternoon, August 2. Twenty-seven ranchers and landowners of the Crooked Creek valley petitioned for the hearing. The Crooked Creek district includes 77,000 acres of land within the Crooked Creek water shed.

The Langell Valley Soil Conservation district, according to Warrens, is the fifth district organized in the state. At least 10 districts are expected to be completed in the state by next January 1, he states. Districts already organized and operating have within their boundaries 342,790 acres and include South Tillamook in Tillamook county; Necanicum and Warrenton districts in Clatsop county; Langell Valley in Klamath county; and Keating in Baker county. Additional districts now in the process of organization include South Wasco in Wasco county; Heppner district in Morrow county; Nehalem district, which includes parts of Clatsop, Columbia, Tillamook and Washington counties; and the Siuslaw district in western Lane county.

The South Tillamook district, the first to be organized in the Pacific northwest, includes 20,000 acres and has headquarters for the USDA's cooperating soil conservation service at Woods. The major problems being attacked in this area include sand dune control through grass plantings and construction of barriers to prevent drifting sand from encroaching upon valuable lands and from stopping the drainage of the Nestucca river. Riverbank erosion control and drainage are two other problems which the district organization is attacking.

The policy of the state commission has been to cooperate with farmers in establishing districts in each of the major types of farming areas in the state as a means of testing its effectiveness in meeting said conservation problems, according to Chairman Warrens. It is desired to create districts as rapidly as they can be adequately serviced with men and equipment by the federal soil conservation service in cooperation with other federal and state agencies created to assist farmers in their erosion control and land use problems. The state committee has also followed the policy that districts should originate with farmers and have the approval of farm leaders on county land use planning committees, who before taking action have had opportunity to study the needs for creating a district. In addition to the chairman, the state committee is composed of Director William A. Schoenfeld of the state agricultural experiment station, Corvallis; William L. Teutsch, assistant director of extension, Corvallis; State Engineer Charles E. Stricklin, Salem; and G. W. Franklin, Enterprise.

SUGAR HOARDING INCREASES PRICE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 (AP)—Apparently fearful that the war may cause shortages, American consumers have engaged in another sugar-hoarding spree but it may backfire on them.

Despite government assurances that supplies were ample, officials said today that housewives, candymakers, manufacturers of other products requiring sugar, wholesalers and retailers have bought sugar at a record-breaking rate this year to build up reserve stocks for use in case of a scarcity or stratosphere prices.

This heavy buying activity had one natural result—a sharp rise in prices. Today those prices are the highest since the war's start in 1939, when a similar epidemic of hoarding led the government to take drastic action to check the advance. Raw sugar is being quoted at about $3.69, duty-paid basis, per hundred pounds at New York.

Agriculture department officials, who ordinarily are able to control sugar prices effectively, consider present quotations excessive.

Third Convict Escapes From Oregon Prison

SALEM, Aug. 1 (AP)—Another convict, the third in 10 days, escaped from the state penitentiary today.

He is Clarence Malone, 18, sentenced at Bend to a year for a sex crime. Malone, whose sentence would end next December, escaped from a prison gun gang on a farm near the prison.

Prison Warden George Alexander said the two prisoners who walked away from the prison 10 days ago are believed on their way to the mid-west. The men, both trustees, are Lauren F. Wallace, 33, sentenced to three years for larceny; and Virgil J. Akin, 38, serving five years for burglary.

SALEM, Aug. 1 (AP)—Albert N. Banks, former business agent for Salem AFL teamsters who hired three men to burn the non-union Salem box factory, Nov. 20, 1937, was released on parole today from the state penitentiary. Banks had served three years of a 12-year sentence.
