consideration of competency and qualifications.

(3) There shall be no strikes or lockouts until peaceful methods of settlement have been exhausted.

Other individual grievances were settled amicably in the negotiations.

The contract was signed by a seven-man negotiating committee composed of Chilquin employees; by Arthur A. Oyer, IWA local 6-12 president, and C. R. Cooper, secretary, for the union; and by E. A. Blocklinger, Chilquin president, and A. O. Blocklinger, firm secretary.

The union, in announcing the settlement, asked that all workers employed at Chilquin the time of the strike return to their former jobs.

FINES VOTED FOR PASSING TICKETS

The Big Lakes Box company local of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' union and the Klamath local of the AFL Machinists' union have voted to fine their members $10 for passing an AFL picket line, it was announced Monday.

G. C. Tatman of the Culinary alliance, who made the disclosure, said the unions' action would aid the alliance in their current difficulty with the J. J. Newberry company.

The alliance on June 14 called a strike on the Newberry lunch counter when the firm allegedly refused to sign an alliance contract calling for a restaurant employees' pay raise.

Meanwhile status of the Newberry dispute remained the same. Pickets continued to parade before the Main street store and negotiations stayed at a standstill.

years for armed robbery and under a life term for a break in 1936 when Dunn led the posse which caught him.

Prison officials said he was the leader of both the 1936 uprising and that yesterday.

The wounded: Bob Pollock, 49, former prison guard who joined Alexander and Ford.

Hiram Prather, 34, serving life for murder.

Bill Anderson, serving 27 years for armed robbery, so badly wounded officers first believed him dead.

Fentress was accompanying Dunn on an inspection of the new prison communication system when the convicts seized him. He was uninjured.

The convicts seized Dunn and Fentress as they approached the penitentiary hospital building. One held a razor at the warden's throat and another held a knife at his back. Fentress was covered similarly.

Marching the pair to the east gate, the convicts directed the tower guards to throw down their guns and open the gate. The warden gave his assent the guards complied. The convicts took the guns, seized the motor car and fled.

"The England that will emerge from the war will bear little resemblance to the England that preceded it."

TRUE enough. There will be changes in England. There will be changes HERE, even though we get no nearer to shooting war than we are now. War is the great breeder of change. The great upsetter. The great leveler.

But while INSTITUTIONS will be changed, human nature will emerge from the war changed very little. The world of the future will follow surprisingly the pattern of the world of the past — for after all it is human nature that sets the pattern of human existence.

The Washington official predicted action might be expected within 48 hours.

He said pressure was being brought on the management of the firm by "management representatives within the OPM." It was indicated that such representatives included, among others, Priorities Director E. R. Isadore B. Dockweiler, Ben White Einzig and Ralph A. Van Allen, all of Los Angeles, asked that congress clarify the tax laws to remedy what they said were "irregularities" in levies on used automobile parts.

Einzig, an automobile repairman, said the internal revenue department assessed a tax on deposit fees paid by the customer on parts placed in an automobile to keep it operating while the original parts were being repaired.

to "scorch the earth in the face of the enemy."

Only about 20,000 of the 160,000 civilians who resided in Smolensk a month ago have remained among the ruins.

German soldiers swarmed over the entire scene, cleaning up and bringing about order so that the German war machine may operate efficiently in the thrust on to the east.

The soldiers have little time for the problems of the civilians and pay little attention to them.

The front has moved on east a few kilometers in the direction of Moscow. Artillery rumbles in the east. Warplanes roar overhead, some of them bombers operating from airdromes which the Germans say they took over almost intact after Russian withdrawals.

Deceptive Quiet

The front, at segments where I approached, seemed quiet. It was explained, however, that such an appearance might be deceptive; that strategic considerations at any moment might require troops to the right or left to thrust forward; that even in a blitz war on a front spread across a continent every soldier isn't on the move every minute.

The Germans said many of the men would be overhauling equipment, catching their breath, or even washing socks in the Dnieper, and uncounted thousands were on dusty highways, along railroads and in the air bringing up supplies which modern warfare uses at a terrific rate.

A hundred miles of travel in this combat zone—much of it in a German military transport plane — revealed that Stalin's scorched earth program was only partly successful here.

Minsk and Vitebsk, over which the plane flew low, appeared desolate—but not to the extent of Smolensk.

In between, however, hundreds of straw-thatched villages,

Plans are being completed for a lunch and dinner ride from Annie Springs ranger station to Diamond lake. Posse members will truck their horses to Annie Springs, ride to Red Rock springs for lunch and continue to Diamond lake for dinner. They will be joined by their families.

dark spots in a yellow countryside, for the most part seemed untouched. The war apparently had swept past them, dealing the more destructive blows to the larger communities.

Here and there could be seen the blackened ruins of villages. In one case a whole community of about 60 houses was burning briskly as we flew over.

The newly named president will appoint the committee.
