GROWERS TRY SPUD DUSTING EXPERIMENT

TULELAKE — Dusting of thousands of acres of potatoes in the Tulelake area as an experiment to control interior brown rot, is under way this week in the Stronghold district, according to an announcement made by W. H. Anderson, Siskiyou county agricultural inspector.

Anderson, Tom Briles, agriculture commissioner of Modoc county, and Barton Branstetter of the state department of agriculture met recently with growers on the possibility of control through the airplane dusting method used with success in the Sacramento valley.

Following the meeting approximately 2000 acres were signed up and the plane brought to the basin. Other growers continue to fall in line and it is expected that the total number of acres treated this season will double the original figure.

Browning is a disease which attacks the meat of the tuber and which cannot be detected until the potato has been cut into. It follows leaf rolling, spread by the aphid, it is believed, and the present project is an experimental, preventive measure. While the disease has been found in a number of localities it has not spread to an alarming degree.

The plane, operated by one man flies low over the fields, distributing a dust of rhotoneone, sulphur and copper from a power blower. Cost to the grower is $4 per acre and acreage treated in a day varies with the surrounding country. Sixty acres, according to one report, were treated in 40 minutes.

The plane flying lower than the power lines covers 20 rows at a sweep and a checker in the field designates rows that have been treated.

STORAGE TRACKS BUILT AT SUMMIT

CASCADE SUMMIT, Ore. — The Southern Pacific company is laying two storage tracks each approximately a mile long at Crescent lake. With the tremendous increase in business due to the defense program, the tracks already there were inadequate to handle the traffic satisfactorily.

After the laying of these two tracks, spring switches commonly known as rubber switches will be installed at either end of the yards so that a train may leave without stopping. A similar switch is in use at Cruzatte. Many delays have thus been eliminated in the meeting and passing of trains.

The lake siding at Cascade Summit will be extended to the west end of the yards. Equipment for this project is now en route. The siding is being extended for the purpose of taking care of longer trains. The present capacity of the siding now is 105 cars. After the extension it will be able to hold 150 cars.

George Rhodes and his signal gang will arrive at Crescent Lake Thursday to take care of the signal work connected with the building of the sidings and the installation of the spring switches.
