New Crop Possibilities

THAT was interesting news in the paper last week about the development of such new crops as cabbage and garlic in the Klamath basin. Considerable volume of these crops is being harvested and evidently is going to market at a fair profit for the producers.

There is a good possibility that such crops as these, along with small seeds, will come more prominently in the Klamath agricultural picture in the immediate future. That such crops could be grown here successfully has been no secret for many years, but there was a rush into the potato business as that developed as a great cash crop, and only in very recent seasons has farmer interest turned to diversification and to other new crop ideas.

This may be stimulated by the world situation. There are certain products which may be grown here, but which heretofore have attracted little interest because they were imported traditionally from Europe. White clover seed is a good example. Flower and vegetable seeds, and other specialties, may be regarded as having possibilities for our agricultural area. Once such products from this district have found the markets previously held by European imports, they will gain in importance and should be able to hold their own even after the world conditions change once more.

The farmers of the Klamath country are an independent but progressive lot. They do not spend a great deal of time crying about situations. It is a good bet that as opportunities arise, they will make the most of them. And that means a lot to all of us in this big community. Regardless of whether it is our personal business to "tickle the soil with a plow," as Judge Ashurst used to say. Soil tickling has a great deal to do with the economic welfare of the basin and its people.

Not a Pension

A PUBLISHED interview with Altha Urquhart, public welfare administrator, emphasizes the little-understood fact that need is the basis of old age assistance in this state.

Common use of the term "pension" has contributed to the misunderstanding of the old age assistance program. A pension is generally regarded as a regular stipend paid in consideration of past services, or at least unaffected by the economic status of the recipient. Pensions, for instance, are paid to retired employees, old soldiers or their widows. There has been a great deal of talk in the last decade about old age pensions, but as yet no program for such pensions has been set up in this state.

On the other hand, the Oregon welfare program does undertake to give assistance to old people who are destitute or so nearly destitute they cannot survive on private resources. Other requirements are that the recipient must be at least 65 years of age and he must have lived in the state five of the last nine years.

If these facts are fully understood, many old people will be spared false hopes and disappointments, and the public welfare agencies will not be unjustly criticized for failure to pay "pensions."

HUGE INHERITANCE CHECK RECEIVED

SALEM, Aug. 18 (P)—Check for the largest inheritance ever paid in Oregon, $874,000, was received by State Treasurer Leslie M. Scott Saturday from the executors of the estate of the late E. S. Collins, Portland lumberman and philanthropist. The payment was based on the executors' estimate of the estate's total value and is subject to official determination after the exact value has been verified, Scott said. The check represented the estimated tax after deduction of 5 per cent, or $46,000, for payment in advance of the deadline, August 18.

"This is the largest estate ever probated in Oregon, so large that the executors will not know for at least another month its exact value," the treasurer commented.

Collins died last December 18.

Airliner Christens New Salem Runway

SALEM, Aug. 18 (P)—A United Air Lines passenger plane, carrying officials of the company, christened the Salem airport's new 4040-foot runway yesterday, the first time a large passenger ship ever landed on the Salem airport.

The officials said they expected to begin regular passenger service to Salem within a few weeks. They now are awaiting government approval.

Salem citizens will vote Wednesday on whether to approve a $75,000 bond issue to provide funds for extension of the airport. Chamber of commerce officials said that if the bond issue passes, it is likely that the army will establish an air base here.

Christian Science

"Soul" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, August 17.

The golden text was, "Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name" (Ps. 103:1).

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord; And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment" (Mark 12:29,30).

The lesson-sermon also included the following correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Question—What are the demands of the Science of Soul? Answer—The first demand of this Science is, 'Thou shalt have no other gods before me.' This is the Spirit. Therefore the command means this: Thou shalt have no intelligence, no life, no substance, no truth, no love, but that which is spiritual" (p. 467).

Woman Makes Dive Through Window To Evade Prowler

REEDSPORT, Aug. 18, (AP)—Mrs. H. M. McCabe awoke Friday night and saw an intruder standing in her bedroom door. He spoke and she sprang from bed and dived head-first through the window, shattering the glass.

The prowler escaped.

Mrs. McCabe, wife of the police chief and deputy sheriff, was cut slightly on one arm.

Mt. Laki

Elda and Vida Ayers of Bonanza are visiting at the home of their sister Mrs. Gray Brannon.

Robert Sparlin submitted to an appendix operation Thursday morning.

The next regular meeting of the Henley grange will be a box social Wednesday, September 3, according to the committee in charge of the Diamond Jubilee program. Mrs. Dorothea Mack, chairman; Mrs. Jeannette Jackson, Leo Jardine, Clifford Kelly Master and Myrtle Fleming, lecturer, met at the Mack home Thursday night to complete the plans. Cards, Chinese checkers and musical numbers will complete the program.

All grange members, their families and friends are cordially invited to attend. The funds raised by the auctioning of the baskets will go to the building fund of the Diamond Jubilee national grange. A good attendance is desired. The program will start at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Guber and family were vacationing at the coast recently.

The deepest sympathy of the neighborhood is extended to the Charles DeLap family in their bereavement.

1000 Delegates at Kiwanis Conclave

SALEM, Aug. 18 (P)—More than 1000 delegates attended the opening business sessions today of the 24th annual north-west Kiwanis convention here today, the three-day meeting having officially opened last night with a religious service.

Charles S. Donley, Pittsburgh, Pa., addressed the delegates today, while J. D. Swenson, in charge of the Portland office of the federal bureau of investigation, spoke on national defense problems.

This afternoon the delegates will go to Silver Creek Falls for a picnic dinner.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18—This government was perturbed by inside news in the wake of the Roosevelt-Churchill agreement, indicating General Budyenny and 39 to 50 divisions of his southern red army were in that trap which the nazis sliced across the Ukraine. This meant possibly three-quarters of a million men dangerously pocketed. The military situation suggested no more than 15 divisions could possibly escape.

The bad news, while not unexpected, inspired week end speculation as to how near the end was in Russia, and particularly what end.

The nazis clearly had their hands on the Ukraine, but the acquisition of this probably denuded rich granary district meant little, because territory has not been the primary military objective of the nazis from the start against the reds. Their campaign has been conducted singly toward the destruction of the red army.

Simultaneously, it became evident here the nazis plan to march what they can of their armies, not back of the Urals as had been previously supposed, but behind the Volga river. Preparations have disclosed their intention.

Consequently it seemed reasonable to assume Stalin might save enough men and machines from the fray to maintain a stable Volga line, leaving the current campaign for the winter on about the same basis as the Chinese, who lost the richest part of their country but are still able to resist indefinitely from Chungking.

INTERPRETATION

Interpretations of the Roosevelt-Churchill agreement and discussions were discouraged by government officials even long after the joint statement was announced, and the British press was interpreting it to the fullest and possibly beyond.

It was quite obvious, however, that the two leaders did not need all those generals and admirals to talk about post-war peace, which is none of the business of the military. From this it could safely be judged that the least important part of the meeting was the joint statement of ultimate peace aims.

Both governments here are plainly following axis diplomatic technique. If they follow the same line further, their agreements will only be made public when action is taken later in either London or Washington.

PRESS BLACKOUT

Only excuse officially suggested here for the complete blackout of the American press on the historic Roosevelt-Churchill meeting at sea is that the British prime minister was invited by us, and as our guest, we had to guard his safety.

The British did not feel that way about it. British news-men, representatives of the press ser-

BENEVOLENCE

To feel much for others, and little for ourselves; to restrain our selfish, and exercise our benevolent affections, constitutes the perfection of human nature.

—Adam Smith.
 Sweeter than the balm of Gilead, richer than the diamonds of Golconda, dear as the friendship of those we love, are justice, fraternity, and Christian charity.

 Benevolent feelings ennoble the most trifling actions.—Thackeray.

The place of charity, like that of God everywhere.—Quarles.
 Do not wait for extraordinary circumstances to do good actions; try to use ordinary situations.—Richer.

Charity is never lost: It may meet with ingratitude, or be of no service to those on whom it was bestowed, yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.—Middleton.

Hughes Predicts Revolt for Japs

PORTLAND, Aug. 18 (P)—Japan is a divided nation which either will revolt or become involved in a war with the United States, Radio Commentator John B. Hughes predicted yesterday.

"It looks like the emperor may swing against the war party. If he does, and lines up with the conservatives, the military will revolt," he told an interviewer.

"Before the war is ended, I think the Japanese will be fighting against the axis," he added.
