REVISION OF CITY CHARTER AGREED UPON

Klamath Falls' obsolete city charter will soon be revised it was decided at a meeting of the city charter committee, meeting in session Monday afternoon with Herman Kehrli, executive secretary of the League of Oregon Cities.

Before March of 1942, voters will go to the polls in a special election to place their stamp of approval on the changes which will be made within the next few months.

The League of Oregon Cities and Kehrli, working with the city's legal department, will prepare the new charter and all changes will be on the ballot, according to Mayor John H. Houston who also attended the meeting.

"The city's charter is obsolete and there have been so many amendments to ordinances that practically all old ordinances are now involved in a maze of technicalities," the mayor stated. "It is this committee's hope that we can iron out all these difficulties and present an up-to-the-minute charter before next March for approval of the voters."

It is also hoped that all ordinances will be so tabulated that they can be found without difficulty when interested persons wish to refer to them at any time. Members of the city council and the city attorney met with the committee.

counsel and advice in this message."

Green said he would transmit to the president the federation's thanks for the greetings and an assurance of cooperation in his aims.

Describing the convention as an "event of international significance," the president's message said:

"It is a symbol of that freedom which we, in the United States, enjoy and must make every sacrifice to maintain.

" . . . you, at this convention, need no reminder of what is at stake for the free workers of America in the present emergency."

The president said that the "threat of Hitlerism" was directed not only at labor "even though labor is among the very first that will suffer therefrom" but that it was also "aimed at all of us—every man, woman and child—who believes in freedom. It menaces everything that we cherish as Americans and free men."

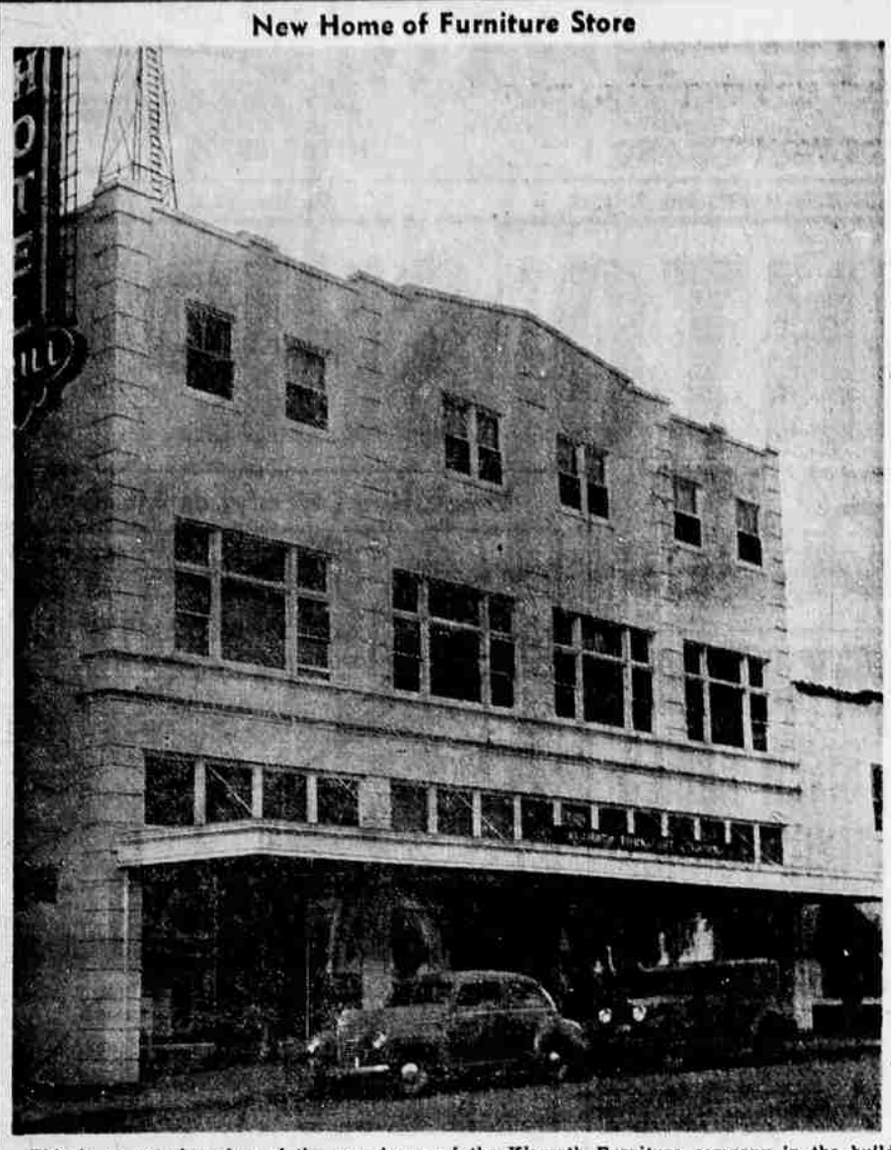
New Home of Furniture Store



This is an exterior view of the new home of the Klamath Furniture company in the building formerly occupied by Montgomery Ward near the Willard hotel. Extensive remodeling of the interior was undertaken to provide effective display of the new furniture stock.

New Features Displayed By Furniture Company in 'Open House' Wednesday

By JAMES MORRISON

Climaxing 15 years of successful furniture business in Klamath Falls, the Klamath Furniture company has announced with becoming pride an invitation to the Klamath basin empire to visit the company's open house to be held all day Wednesday from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. at the store's new location in the completely remodeled building next to the Willard hotel.

This writer was conducted by the manager on a preview tour of the entire building formerly occupied by Montgomery Ward. For months the building, owned by W. D. Miller, had been unoccupied, probably because it was too big for most types of businesses. I can remember last winter when Herb Cochran's band used to use the mezzanine floor for rehearsals and the men played with overcoats and mittens on. It is amazing what changes have been made to the building itself — let alone the 20,000 square feet of floor space covered with eye-capturing furniture—to make it one of the finest appearing structures in the city. Manager Robert Sproat commended the owner. He said Miller went to every effort to improve the building to suit the needs of its new occupants.

The whole main floor is open. Behind a wide window display decorated by George Sinclair, formerly with Barker Brothers of Los Angeles, lie acres of fine furniture. Upstairs on the mezzanine, however, are the store's showplaces. There's a model kitchen with inlaid linoleum drainboard and chromium trimmings. Around the room are neat, short rolls of linoleum which can in two seconds be laid out on the floor and matched with other materials to give you an idea of a kitchen color scheme. Large linoleum samples may be taken home for matching or contrasting colors.

Next to the model kitchen is a new addition to services previously offered to Klamath Furniture company customers. It's an interior decorating department. This can be seen upon entering the big front door — and it's not a bad idea at all. Lamps and curtains and draperies are arranged in all sorts of combinations. Sinclair is in charge of the much needed department, neglected in the city heretofore.

But to make the building even more spacious, big enough to accommodate everything under one roof, they've added a large L off the old mezzanine to the front. First thing you see there is a unique mattress and springs display. So unique, in fact, it is understood there isn't another one like it in the west. Instead of piles of mattresses—the kind you always want to see the bottom one first and cause the salesman trouble trying to drag it out—these mattresses are displayed singly in booths. They lean on an angle to the wall where they can easily be swung outward so you can squeeze them and inspect both sides. At the end of the booths are springs to match.

Still on the mezzanine, you walk over thick carpet to the cherry wood department—wood from Wendell Willkie's home town of Rushville, Ind. — and Grand Rapids dressers, etc., ending at a complete array of baby furniture. From this vantage point at the front of the store you can look down through a great well onto the main floor, and it's really a remarkable job of decorating. Mirrors and pictures add immeasurably to the scene.

The whole top floor is a warehouse, except for a furniture refinishing workroom and a drapery and upholstering workshop. An elevator at the rear makes loading and deliveries easy. The company also purchased a large new cab-over-engine van for deliveries, large enough to furnish an average home in one trip.

National defense hasn't affected the Klamath Furniture company so far, because a complete new stock was purchased before the going started to get tough. Everything in the old store at 721 Main street was sold recently at auction and everything in the new store is new. The only furniture items becoming hard to get are those made mostly of metal, but even these are still being shipped.

Personnel of the company numbers 15. Two men are kept busy installing linoleum and carpets under the direction of Stanley Clark, a veteran of 10 years' service here, and three women are employed in the drapery workshop. Marion Robbins, salesman, has been in the furniture business here for many years. He once served for Mordoff and Woolf, a pioneer store. Bob Sproat and son are partners and managers.

Besides all this, there's a downstairs store, formerly the "Upstairs Store," at the old location on South Ninth. The lower store is lower—that is, the prices are not so high. Al Anderson is in charge, and it's a place where quality furniture can be purchased if you're operating on a limited budget or just want a bargain.

Starting out 15 years ago at 1011 Main street, the Klamath Furniture company moved after five years to 721 Main, where it stayed 10 years before becoming cramped for space. The last move to the big white building next to the Willard brought a certain amount of comment that the business was moving "the wrong way" in connection with trends of other local establishments. But the managers are firm in their conviction that it is a wise move. They have now the most complete, modern display of fine furniture anywhere in the area, and it's placed where customers can see it.

The firm extends an invitation to open house at the store Wednesday. No goods will be sold in the evening, although the building will be open until 10 o'clock.

Footprinters to Entertain State Police Sergeant

Sergeant Lewis Johnson, for several years stationed in Klamath county as head of state police, will be the honor guest at a dinner to be given Wednesday at 7 p. m. in the Pelican party room when Footprinters entertain.

All members of the organization are asked to be on hand for the party which will feature entertainment and a program. Sergeant Johnson is being transferred to Pendleton on October 15.

TWO DROWN AS FREIGHT TRAIN TAKES PLUNGE

Albert Penman, the north span started sagging.

"Then it went down, slowly," Penman said. "I stood there watching it. The locomotive went with it. Two of the fellows crawled up the bridge but the other two, I guess, drowned."

Busy Waterway

The St. Mary's canal, one of the world's busiest waterways, connects the upper and lower lakes of the Great Lakes chain and feeds to the steel mills of the east the vast stores of ore from the iron ranges of the north.

Bridge Tender Penman, 56, a veteran of 15 years at his job said it might be two or three days before normal river traffic could be resumed but later amended this to say it was "pretty hard to tell" when this could be done.

From his tower on the American side of the river, Penman said he saw the train come onto the bridge. The bridge is of jack-knife design and steel construction.

"All I can tell you," Penman said, "is that the bridge was all set. The signal lights were set and everything was o. k. in the tower when the train came on. I don't know how it could have happened."

Trouble Coincides With Council Study Of Jail Problem

City fathers launched a discussion of the ever-present jail problem Monday night as the council sat around the glass-topped table in regular session. At the exact moment someone brought up the jail situation a wail—cross between a coyote's mournful cry and a siren's screech — reached the ears of council and visitors alike.

The wail, investigation proved after recurrences of the cry, came from a white woman prisoner, jailed on a drunk charge. All was not sorrow in the woman's section, however, as a short time later the moaning turned into a loud battering and banging. Officers found a badly mangled cell the next morning, the mattresses in scraps, the bunks torn from the walls, and the beds ripped. The lady Samson paid her fine Tuesday morning and left the mess for the jailer to clean up.

small purchase, to get back more money than you put out.

It's a little confusing at first, but you soon get used to it. Transactions are simplified by the fact that American and Canadian money are in the same denominations.

IN many of the larger stores, especially in Montreal, they'll take your American money and give you back your change, if you wish, in American money In such cases, the price is merely discounted 10 per cent, which at present balances the difference in exchange.

Canadian dollar bills, incidentally, are printed in both English and French, as in the case in the province of Quebec with traffic and other signs.

WATCH Americans here and you'll get a good object lesson in one of the first and most fundamental of the laws of money.

They spend their American money cannily, because they know all about it and are sure it will be good tomorrow and next week and next month. They are much more reckless with the Canadian money they receive in change. In fact, you'll be pretty sure to feel that way about it yourself.

Yet your Canadian money is perfectly sound. You get 10 per cent more of it (at present rates) when you exchange American money for it in the first place, and if you are left with any of it on your hands you can take it to any established store (you don't need to go to a bank) and exchange it for American money —of which you will get 10 per cent less, thus balancing the transaction.

But it's 10 to one that when tipping the bellhop or the waitress you'll be more liberal with Canadian money.

SALVATION ARMY WEEK PROCLAIMED

A PROCLAMATION

WHEREAS, the Salvation Army is a power for good in this community, and

WHEREAS, the Salvation Army is universally recognized as a social and spiritual organization of unique and outstanding accomplishments through its more than seventy years of world-wide operation, and

WHEREAS, the Salvation Army has proved for over fifteen years its value to our own city of Klamath Falls. To the city its services are indispensable. There is no organization more worthy of our support.

NOW THEREFORE, as the Mayor of our city, I am pleased to designate the week of October 12th through the 19th as Salvation Army Home Service Week in the City of Klamath Falls, and ask cooperation of the citizens of Klamath Falls in responding to this appeal.

grimly to the iron rings and pegs driven in the hard rock.

Hopkins, who has had only food dropped from airplanes during his lone vigil, was taken to the ranger station for a good meal.

A large crowd at the foot of the rock formation in northeastern Wyoming watched breathlessly as the 115-pound Texan made his way gingerly from one climber to the next.

Hopkins waved to the crowd of more than 1000 as he descended, wearing white shirt and pants. He had a camera and took pictures of the people as he cautiously made his way down the peak under the guidance of the climbers.

PINCER MOVES DRIVE BEHIND CENTRAL LINE

army announced that Leningrad's defense guns had smashed 19 German earth-and-timber forts on the approaches to the old czarist capital, silenced two artillery batteries and put other nazi siege weapons out of action.

Masses of German troops were said to have been dispersed by soviet fire.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters indicated that the battle north of the Azov sea was part of the "gigantic new developments" which the feuhrer himself declared had begun last Wednesday.

"German troops, shoulder to shoulder with troops of the allied countries, are pursuing the defeated enemy," the nazi communique said.

"Motorized and tank units thrust deep into the enemy retreating columns."

The Russians, acknowledging that the Germans had "wedged into our lines" at an unspecified sector of the western (Moscow) front, reported that soviet tanks and bombers had destroyed 34 nazi tanks in fierce counterblows.

Advices reaching London said the Germans had suffered bloody casualties on the narrow Perekop isthmus, in a drive southward into the Crimea peninsula, and that a nazi division had been halted at Genichesk, on the northwest shores of the Azov sea, under shelling by the red fleet.

Silent on operations along the central (Moscow) front, the German high command admitted that the Russians had made a new attempt to land troops under cover of night on the Finnish gulf coast west of Leningrad, but declared:

"A majority of the ships used for transport were sunk. The enemy units which landed were completely annihilated."

Tiny Girl Safe After Wandering For Eight Days

of brooks and everything, but there hasn't been anything to eat. I want to see my mummy and daddy."

News of her safety led some observers to the belief that she had been kidnaped and released, but Dr. Charles Smith, who examined her after she was taken to a hospital, said there was nothing to indicate she had been out of the woods.

"She apparently had all the water she needed, but she had nothing to eat," said Dr. Smith. "Her feet showed some frostbite and were quite swollen."

Because of the swelling, her sneakers were cut from her before she was placed in bed. Her first "meal" consisted of orange juice and lactose toast.

Scarcely an hour before she was found, High Sheriff James Welch announced that hope of finding her alive had been abandoned.

But the search went on—as it had for the last few days—largely because the girl's father, Joseph Hollingworth, Lowell, Mass., business man and civic figure, refused to quit. He stayed in the search area constantly from the time the girl disappeared.

Notified by portable radio at the base camp that Pamela was alive, he raced up the trail and carried her down in his arms, almost too overcome to speak.

Matson, hardly believing his eyes when he first saw the child, could only ask:

"What's your name?"

"Pammy," said the girl.

"You are in better shape than we are," he told her.
