

Hair-Set So Original It Won Patent

By ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

Often you hear it said there's nothing new in beauty. Well, here's a super-duper so original that Uncle Sam gives it a patent.

It is not a gadget, but a way to curl hair. It includes one step, which is simple enough for any woman to follow in glorifying her own tresses with a home-made shampoo and waveset. Presumably, too, she wouldn't get sued. At any rate, the originator, a famous hair designer, gave me leave to explain it to you here. However, don't go trying to get an unlicensed professional salon operator to do it for you, because anyone caught at that would be legally liable for infringement of No. 2232826, the patent!

Basic principle of the important step is just this: in setting in pin-curls, the locks are parted in triangles instead of in squares. You know how hair usually has been set. First comes the part that will remain when the hair is combed—suppose it's a part on the right side. Then another part is made perpendicular to the first. Then a third part is made, setting off a square on the scalp. In the new method, the third part is made diagonally, so it marks off a triangle on the scalp. With the hair on this triangularly blocked-out area, the pincurl is made.

FIFTH AVENUE TAKES CAREFUL NOTICE

Fifth avenue sat up and noticed recently when the designer demonstrated in the store which will use the method exclusively in New York. The designer once was a sculptor. His droopy-locked models drove him to pioneer in "sculpturing" women's hair in Paris. He says some knowledge of engineering also helped him devise this new tapering triangle method of curling hair.

Now he is training operators who will be licensed to create it in one salon in each of 23 cities. There's more to the method than I can explain here, or you can do for yourself in setting your hair. But it strikes me any intelligent woman can profit by trying the new triangle in working with her own wave-setting routine.

Woman's Breakfast Holds Up Train

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 6 (P)—A woman passenger who demanded the right to finish her breakfast at leisure in a dining car held up the Pennsylvania railroad's Chicago-New York express train for 13 minutes yesterday.

Trainmen wanted to shift the diner to a siding in the Harrisburg yards and take on a new car. The passenger refused to budge until she had finished her bacon and eggs. Baffled but discreet, the crew waited.

Sprague Speaks for Red Cross Drive

SALEM, Nov. 6 (P)—Governor Charles A. Sprague appealed today to Oregon citizens to contribute to the American Red Cross, whose annual drive begins November 11.

Asserting that the Red Cross button is a "true sign of patriotic sharing in the work of this most American agency," the governor asked all Oregonians to answer "present and contributing" when the drive is held.

DUBLIN, Ind. (P)—The proverbial life limit of three score years and ten doesn't hold for Riley A. Laymon.

Now, at 71, he's the father of twins—a boy and a girl—by a 29-year-old wife.

And he has a new job in a Cambridge City factory.

Here Are Some Sure Ways NOT to Get That Job!

By RUTH MILLETT
No matter what kind of job you are trying to get, there is one rule to remember. If you want the job, ACT like you want it.

That rule sounds almost too obvious to mention, yet it isn't at all unusual for a girl who really wants a certain job to give the impression of not caring whether she gets it or not. She does so by making one of the following mistakes:

Saying to a prospective employer over the telephone, when he calls 10 o'clock as a time for an interview, "Couldn't I come at such-and-such a time instead; I had planned to do so-and-so at ten." Then she names some personal errand that sounds trivial to the employer.

Arriving late for the interview or for the first day's work.

Showing considerably less interest in the job than in trying to find out just how hard the job is going to be.

Taking a "What have you got to offer me?" attitude instead of a "This is what I can offer you" approach.

Bragging of a job offer she recently turned down because the prospective employer expected entirely too much work for what he was willing to pay. That is bound to irritate another employer, who naturally sees the situation from an employer's point of view.

Saying, "I guess I could" instead of "Yes, I could" to the question, "Could you start to work next Monday?"

LET EMPLOYER END INTERVIEW

Attempting to end the interview, instead of waiting for the employer to give the signal that it is over.

Asking what time it is when the interview is finished, thereby giving the employer the idea there are other things more important in her life than landing a job.

Forgetting to thank the employer for granting her an interview.

Any one of those mistakes is enough to make an employer think, "I guess she doesn't want this job very badly. And there are several other girls who do."

Gloves Dry Soft With New 'Shampoo'--Even Suede

By ALICIA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

How is the hand that does more work this year of our defense—sometimes a man's heavy work—going to look pretty pouring tea?

The answer is twofold. Care. And protection — by wearing gloves.

As if just to meet the protection problem, up comes a new liquid to shampoo gloves exactly as you shampoo hair. This is no soap, but it washes leather clean, and as harmlessly as water will. It's the answer to the cleaning question about the now-so-fashionable two-color gloves.

Glove manufacturers vouch for it—with this, the color may bleed a bit into the washing water, but it won't run, won't streak. Reason: this is a neutral agent which simply unbinds the dirt from the glove, whether it's fabric or leather, and does this in hard, soft, or ocean water.

A man I know washed his tan pigskin and brown suede gloves this way. Stores have tested the preparation on capeskin, suede, doeskin, chamois, mocha and pigskin gloves for women. It is supposed to make many fine gloves "washable."

CLEAN GLOVES ARE BEAUTY ESSENTIAL

When you wash gloves — and, by the way, do keep them spotless and fresh looking if you want to observe one of the very first rules of good grooming — squeeze instead of rubbing them. And squeeze again instead of wringing them.

Let them dry, then fingerpress them. Just dampen your hand and work the glove gently between the fingers. They'll be soft as new. Whatever cleaning agent you use, be sure to use it often. The makers of the new shampoo say that with it you don't even have to fingerpress most gloves.

Plan Parties That Boost Morale for National Defense

Food prices are high. Budgets must be watched. Extravagance is a blow to national defense. Nevertheless, it's our duty to keep our morale high, and entertaining friends helps with that job. Simple parties take our minds off our national and personal problems for a few refreshing hours, making us better potential defenders of our homes.

Why not put parties on a community basis? Plan with your friends a dinner to which each brings one cooked dish.

Always important to such a meal is a tangy salad, for example:

AVOCADO SALAD, (Serves 4)

One avocado, 2 1/2 cups chopped apples (with skin), French dressing, 2 tablespoons catsup, lettuce, 1 cup chopped celery.

Marinate avocado in French dressing one hour. Combine small pieces avocado, apples and celery with one cup French dressing to which you have added the two tablespoons of catsup, beaten well. Place on salad plates — garnish with lettuce and large slices of avocado.

CRABMEAT CHESTER

Selected crabmeat, chopped chives, chervil, tarragon and parsley, finely shredded lettuce, romaine or escarole, 2/3 greens to 1/3 crabmeat, French dressing, catsup (equal amount to French dressing), chopped chives or scallion tops, pepper and salt.

Mix crabmeat with chopped herbs. In a separate bowl combine shredded greens, chives or scallion tops, salt, pepper with equal parts of French dressing and catsup. Mix well and use

STEAMED CRANBERRY PUDDING

(Serves 4 to 6)

Two cups fresh cranberries, 1 1/3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon mace, 2 teaspoons soda, 1/3 cup hot water, 1 cup molasses.

Halve cranberries; add to flour, salt, spices and soda. Combine hot water and molasses and add to first mixture. Blend well. Transfer to well-greased pudding mold; cover and steam for 2 1/2 hours. Unmold and serve with toffee sauce.

TOFFEE SAUCE (Makes 2 Cups)

One cup sugar, 1 cup cream,

1/3 cup butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Combine sugar, cream and butter in top of double boiler. Heat until blended. Add vanilla. Serve warm.
