

Action Gifts Get 'Teen-Agers' Call For This Yuletide

The coming bumper Christmas of 1941 is really going to put a gleam of excitement in young America's eyes. And into the eyes of parents and friends with lively adolescent youngsters to shop for.

Teen-age youngsters like most "do" things. They're at the ripe age, they want paraphernalia for action—sport, dancing, lively games. And they love anything that makes them feel that they are already "grown ups."

This year stores are stocked more bewilderingly richly than ever before—with things for teen-agers.

How to choose? There's a simple key. First, get one "Don't" in the front of your mind. DON'T buy something that you would have liked when you were his or her age. Twenty years can make a huge difference in the tastes of fourteen-year-olds. So listen to the younger, watch and see what elates him or her now, and play up to that.

Typical of the principal to go on is the hour's best-selling kind of gift for both boys and girls—eyeglasses. They outfit the youngster for fun, and they keep him warm at school also. For boys, there are leather jackets—snug, woolen lumberjackets; lightweight, but warm, cotton windbreakers. For girls, skating and snow clothes are styled and sturdy enough for a party, or simple enough for classroom.

And they're gay! SPORTS EQUIPMENT BRINGS THE BELL

Clothes — just natty enough clothes — will make young girls glad.

Boys will go for new, aptly decorated fountain pens and wrist watches. Some of the watches, popular priced, have comic strip characters on the strap.

Or does your adolescent son prefer work-play things? You could give him a useful and deeply satisfying desk—very handsome ones are shown this year in good oak, walnut, and other beautiful woods. Or, if he has a new desk set to make his new work or hobby even more absorbing.

But you want to give him pure pleasure too? It's the easiest gift of all to find. Sports equipment from ski clothes to duck-shooting is here—and with new flair. Gift buyers report a big wave of buying for country lads—22 rifles, and semi-automatic pistols. One new bull's eye set shoots meaningful lead pellets. For the Boy Scout or budding huntsman, there's a combination knife and axe. Knife blade and axe are interchangeable in the genuine stag handle. They come in a leather sheath. Besides skis and bicycles, there are small outing accessories with new dash—for instance, brilliantly colored, warm Adirondack slippers, knitted, with felt soles.

For the home builder, there are tool sets of every description. One set which won't bend the moderate budget contains seven basic tools that will take him through any repair job around the house. Then there is a well electric set with routers, polishing buffers and tiny circular saws. With it your ambitious youngsters can make plenty of useful and amusing things. Games that father and son, and sometimes the whole family, can play together are good for growing youngsters. A good example of this is the home bowling alley. Everybody plays, and nobody has to run to the pins because there's an automatic setter-upper.

MANY GIFTS FOR HOBBIES

A 1941 version of our old favorite, dominoes, appears with a wartime flavor — the player whose dominoes first spell out the Morse "dot-dot-dot-dash" V-for-Victory shouts—and gestures "Thumbs up!"

Then there's the hobby-gift—here in more complete and swank form than ever before. For instance, the photographer. You can equip him as modestly or as opulently as you please, with a camera that costs no more than his gloves, or with everything for his own dark room.

Girls' sports clothes are remarkable for fashion and style, this year, and they're outstandingly knitwear. So give her hat, gloves, mittens, or weskit—or all. Most popular single garment seems to be the sleeveless, very new, knitted weskit—multiform, gay. One entrancing white one has a border of red roses.

Other surprise clothes for girls are reversible all-weather coats—tan gabardine on one side, and on the other the brightest plaid she ever saw. And there are beautiful dickeys to go under her sweaters. One set of six sharkskin ones is all done up in a merry Christmas package. Whatever clothes you give her—give them gay.

"GLAMOR GIRLS" WANT PARTY CLOTHES

Something to keep the sparkle in her eye for a trifle is costume jewelry. New wooden and plastic varieties are surprisingly well made for trinkets. There's charm galore in a simulated turquoise and silver bracelet, a bracelet to match her wooden shoes, or an ornamental pencil on a metal chain. For more money, you can get her a "Great Lovers" bracelet and necklace, and then figures reproducing perfectly Cleopatra and Heloise and six others will adorn her throat and wrist, each with her love beside her.

But if she's already a glamor girl, then she wants party clothes and special ones—the exquisite dancing frock with tulle skirt so long and full and graceful it will make your own heart stop just to look at it, or the exquisite gold, palleted, or beaded evening bag, or the magnificent little mink jacket.

She very likely wants, more than anything now, the things that belong to social occasions and stimulate her social graces. So if you can afford to, by all means give her a fencing, swat, a harp, or a complete ski or beach outfit. Or at least an evening ornament for her hair, a Cinderella-lovely dancing slipper or a jeweled compact.

Table Sets Good For Card Addicts

Families, whose principal amusement is playing cards will find a broad selection from which to choose in selecting card tables or bridge sets this year. Whether the game be poker, pinochle or bridge, the stores are equipped to supply every need, from collapsible hide-away tables to permanent part-of-the-furnishings, ideally suited to the corners of rooms, bay windows or niches.

ALMOST FORGOT—We need candles, and plenty of them at Christmas time around our house. Sharon discovered. We use candles in the living room, on the mantel, and especially on our dining room table. Mother says there is nothing like candlelight when we open our gifts on Christmas eve. Seems to put the finishing touch on all the fun.

SANTA'S WORKSHOP AT FIREHALL BUSY

Klamath's own little elves, the firemen, are merrily passing the days away in their workshop producing toys of all colors and models for the poor children when Christmas rolls around.

Boxes upon boxes of used toys and games are piled in stacks from one end of the fire hall to the other waiting for their "operations."

The firemen work in groups; a couple fix new wheels on wagons, tires on wheels, and replace lost parts, while others daub their paint brushes in all colors of the rainbow and start the painting. Then another takes the painted work and splashes the finishing touches on the toy and it is set away to dry.

The fine workmanship on the used vehicles is so great it astonishes the firemen themselves and they want to step in the peddle-car or hop on a finished sled and be the first to try it out.

There are about 100 toys already finished with their bright coats of paint and the big room in which they are placed looks like a big downtown toyland. In another corner there are a hundred or more boxes of games. The only hope of the firemen is that there will be over twice as many to come into the workshop before Christmas.

Next Saturday approximately 1000 more toys and games will flood into the station after the annual "Bring a Toy" show held at the Pelican theatre.

Those toys that you have been kicking around the house for sometime will be more than welcome at the fire station to help those other kids when December 25 comes round.

Button, Button Idea for Milady

Ranking high on Christmas gift lists, and to be selected in the notions departments of local stores, are handsome buttons which can be matched to earrings and clips.

A far cry from mundane things to put through buttonholes, the new buttons are jeweled, whether made of wood, metal, plastic or composition and take the form of animal, bird, flower, insignia, sheer whimsy and pure beauty!

ELKS MAKE PLANS FOR SEASON EVENTS

Klamath Elks are planning special events for the Christmas season, with Myrtle C. Adams as chairman of the committee in charge, according to Exalted Ruler Lawrence Slater.

Slater said the Elks plans are somewhat changed from former years. The organization carries on throughout the year a charity program in keeping with one of the principles of the order.

We must stop thinking in terms of "business as usual." By the same token we must stop thinking in terms of "strikes as usual."—Sidney Hillman, labor member of OPM.
