HITLER CAN'T WIN ASSERTS AUTHOR

SPOKANE, Dec. 2 (AP)—"Hitler can't win," Erskine Caldwell, author and foreign correspondent, asserted Monday.

And, he added, "Russia, not England nor the United States, but Russia will win the war in the end."

Who will win after the war in the establishment of the peace will "depend on how smart the diplomats are," he said, adding: "If they (the allied countries) try to cheat Russia, they're going to regret it. You know, England is not completely reliable."

Caldwell and his wife, Margaret Bourke-White, famous photographer, spent from May 1 to October 1 this year in Russia and were bombed 26 nights in a row before they left Moscow.

Of the Russian people, he said, "there is no negative feeling. The people accept the fact there can be no defeat. They are better off than they were before they changed their government. Communism is working for them."

Despite loss of 3,000,000 men, Russia has 10,000,000 more in the field and 10,000,000 others in reserve, he said.

"Even if Germany takes Moscow, it won't mean anything," he added. "And, it's doubtful that Germany can take Moscow unless the Russian command decides to give it up."

"Russia may win sooner with the help of the English and the United States, but she'll win. It doesn't particularly matter how much land is lost; Russia has plenty of land and is strong enough to stand up indefinitely."

Caldwell came to Spokane to address the Spokane Junior chamber of commerce. He will leave for Los Angeles tonight.

HIGH SCHOOL

News Notes and Comment

A Bible for every home room was received Monday from the president of the Oregon Gideon, Mr. Dryden.

The International Gideon society is the organization that puts Bibles in all hotel rooms and gives New Testaments to most of the inducted soldiers.

The presentation was made to Glen Kennedy president of the local Hi-Y, which is a branch of YMCA, Young Men's Christian association.

The book will be where any person in the high school may read if he or she wishes.

The Hi-Y is opening its annual food drive for Christmas. Give till it helps.

The Boys' Alliance carnival will be held Friday night. Dancing will be in the south end of the gym with booths set along the walls. There will be an admission price of 15 cents per person or couples for 25 cents.

It is definitely going to be a big thing. It will probably set a mark for future carnivals to bang away at.

The Red Cross home nursing classes, two, are having a contest between themselves. The members of each class write essays on "Care of the Skin." Then the winners in each class are put together to pick a winner.

Recently Mrs. Thelma Davis lectured to the classes on the subject.

The compositions should be 200 words or more in length and must be in before December 10. To the girl who wins a local drug store will give a youth's complexion kit.

Final installment is due on the El Rodeo. Four bits is the amount. Hurry and pay.

By the way, picture selections were due Monday night according to a local studio. That means that the annual will be that much nearer completion. Hurray! Kraters will have a surprise this Thursday, wait.

SOUTH SIXTH PLAN DUE IN JANUARY

The highway commission will endeavor to make a decision on the South Sixth street improvement program not later than the January meeting, the chamber of commerce was informed Monday by R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer.

It is understood highway department crews have been studying right-of-way matters and making surveys in the South Sixth street area. Widening and other improvement of the busy artery, and selection of an alternate route, are matters under consideration.

WATER TANK BECOMES BIG LANDMARK

HERMISTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—Soaring 130 feet skyward on sturdy steel legs, vividly painted with red and white checks and gayly bedecked with aeronautical obstruction lights, the 150,000 gallon water tank of the Umatilla ordnance depot has become a new outstanding eastern Oregon landmark.

West-bound travelers along transcontinental highway No. 30 first sight it as they top Rieth ridge near Pendleton, more than 30 miles to the east, and it remains their marker until they dip into the Columbia River basin route west of Umatilla.

Nor is the water tower the only change in the eastern Oregon landscape contributed by the $13,000,000 depot. Near its base are half a dozen brick and tile permanent buildings; outside the administration area there are a dozen steel and brick powder magazines, and, sprawled over 24 square miles of surrounding desert, are 1000 concrete and steel igloos, blending harmoniously with the sand and sage brush in which they are studded. The igloos are not visible when the traveler first sights the vivid tower, but, as he swings nearer, topping each rolling hill, they enter his consciousness. At first they appear as tiny beehives, dotting the desert; a few hill tops later they seem to become sand dunes, and, finally, he is aware of them as a tremendous monument to American preparedness.

Major Harry E. Schuppner announced today that the project is 92 per cent complete. The payroll of J. A. Terteling & Sons, contractors, has dwindled from 7000 to less than 800, and Major Ralph Cook Scott, ordnance department, U. S. army, has already established his headquarters and has employed a considerable portion of his permanent party. Major Schuppner pointed out:

"All branches will be completed by January, completion date originally set for the project," Major Schuppner said.
