ABOUT POTATOES

A potato plant produces its seed above the ground, but true potato seeds are a rarity, and cuttings of the underground tubers usually are used for reproduction.

Even in the instant of attack, it became a matter, so far as the audience was concerned of pulsation, rather than of signal—a nuance of space and time, if one can so describe it, felt by both play-ars intuitively and acted upon spontaneously. It was almost unthorough an ever-changing emotional picture, it became the thoroughly matured expression of two minds and musical temperaments which are merged into a complete unity.

Their technical equipment is prodigious and brilliant, but this is almost forgotten in the color, the brilliance, the limpid beauty of their singing tone, the poetry of their reading and the swift contrasts of dynamism with which they point the rhythmic scheme of every style of composition.

The final eleven days of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo brought three more ballets new to the Metropolitan stage this season. They were Bogatyri, Swan Lake and The Fantastic Toy Shop. Bogatyri was first presented in its new and shorter version on Oct. 23. It is a choreographic legend in three scenes set to Borodin's second symphony. Both choreography and le-gend are almost completely swallowed up by the intensely colorful scenery and costumes of Gontcharova. Indeed, it was difficult to locate the are of such dancers as Danilova, Krassovska, Franklin, Platoff, Guerard, Zoritch and Eglevsky.

Concerning Swan Lake, one today speaks of the performers and not the ballet itself; the music and choreography are as familiar as Rachmaninoff's C sharp minor Prelude. On Oct. 26 Toumanova was the Queen of the Swans. The attempt was not entirely successful, for Toumanova's talents are not shown to best advantage in the role. She is too earthy and her movements are too sharp to suggest the fluttery and airy qualities of the part. Youskevitch was splendid in the role of Prince Massine's Fantastic Toy Shop, which was presented on Oct. 28, is welcome, if only for the delightful Rossini score that has been orchestrated by Respighi. But there are many hilarious moments of pantomime and meritorious dancing. The Dancing Poodles and the Can-Can dancers (Massine and Danilova) are always sure fire, and make up for any weakness that one might find in the presentation.

Carmalita Maracci, Uruguayan dancer, opened her American tour on October 29 in Denver in Arthur Oberfelder's Great-Artist Series. She is making her first American transcontinental tour and is assisted by Paul Godkin and an ensemble of girl dancers. A tour of 50 cities has been arranged for her by F. C. Coppicus, who managed the late Argentina, Maracci will appear in New York, Hartford, Philadelphia, Annapolis, Newport News, Washington, Pittsburgh, East Lancing, Rochester, Chicago, St. Paul, Topeka, Colorado Springs, Butte, Pocatello, Kalispell, Walla Walla, Olympia, Tacoma, Seattle, San Francisco, San Diego, Fresno, Los Angeles and Klamath Falls.

Veterans to Have Christmas Gifts

American Legion Auxiliary Sending Holiday Presents to Men in Nation's Hospitals

Every disabled war veteran who must spend Christmas in a hospital will receive a gift from the American Legion auxiliary, Mrs. George R. Hurn, hospital chairman of Klamath Unit number eight, announced today. More than 100,000 gifts are expected to be distributed by the auxiliary in hospitals throughout the country.

To enable the veterans in the hospitals to enjoy Christmas without worries about their families at home, the families are visited by auxiliary workers through a na-tion-wide family contact system and needs for a happy Christmas supplied. This work is reported back to the hos-pitals so the veterans may know their families are not in want. In the Roseburg hospital the auxiliary gift shop makes it possible for the veterans to send presents to their families, themselves. Mrs. Hurn reports that she has sent a nice box of gifts to Roseburg for this purpose.

Mrs. A. L. Paul, child wel-fare chairman of the local unit, and her committee has been very busy during the past few weeks making and stuffing toy animals to bring Christmas cheer to the children. The junior auxiliary, in charge of Mrs. A. L. Heup, has made a number of nice scrap books which will also distributed in time for Christmas.

The Christmas activities in the hospitals are just part of the continuous work done by the auxiliary for the men who sacrificed health and strength in the nation's service. With it is important for the national morale that the defenders of the past be not forgotten.

Mrs. Adolph Zamsky enter tained for members of her bridge club and several guests Wednesday evening.
