ARMY FLIERS LUCKY IN FORCED LANDING

LAKEVIEW, Ore.—The guardian angel of aviators was undoubtedly hovering over seven of Uncle Sam's fliers last Saturday afternoon when a heavy two-motored bomber safely negotiated a landing near the Hart mountain antelope refuge.

A hike of 12 miles brought them to the residence of Jean Branson, which they had not observed in their search for a suitable landing place. Here their luck continued when contact was immediately established with army headquarters by means of Branson's radio.

The plane was short of fuel, making it necessary that the plane be landed for the night. No airport in the vicinity was large enough for a landing so an emergency landing site had to be discovered. After circling Warner valley numerous times the commanding officer decided that the lake beds in that area were too soft for the heavy plane. A barren knoll in the Hart mountain region looked promising and the plane was landed without mishap. On Monday the plane was able to take off successfully.

From School—Bob Jester of the University of Oregon is among the students returning home from school for the holidays.

THE 1942 GILMORE GRAND CANYON RUN POSTPONED

... because all activity must be directed to one goal — winning the war.

Rubber must be conserved. So must gasoline, lubricants and man power. Accordingly... and it is with regret... we have postponed the Gilmore Grand Canyon Run.

The decision to defer the world's stock car classic was reached on our own volition... without an order or suggestion from any government department.

At a future date we will again sponsor this annual mileage test for new cars. But in the meantime, all energies must be directed to one goal — winning the war.
