NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—Slight moans have been emitted by some officials because the secret of Churchill's Christmas visit as so loosely kept. The fact is it was darn well kept. Most newsmen in Washington knew at least four days before the announcement was made that the British prime minister was either here or on his way.

The suppressed news had reached so many persons by Saturday morning that presidential press secretary Steve Early, openly cautioned reporters at his press conference not to cause its publication. By Sunday the new press censor, Byron Price, was telephoning news agencies urging them again to avoid the story.

It is true some speculations about Churchill's disappearance came out of London early in the week, after Clement Attlee told commonsense he was taking over in the absence of the prime minister. Two indefinite yarns followed out of Washington, but the activities of Early and Price halted any more definite notice which would have endangered Churchill on his voyage.

Churchill, F. R. Both Speak On Christmas Eve

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26 (UP)—In the glow of Christmas lights from a community tree, President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill together re-dedicated the United States and Great Britain to the destruction of the axis and the rebirth of a "decent world."

Facing thousands massed before the south portico of the White House for the annual Christmas tree lighting ceremonies, the leaders of the two powerful nations expressed confidence of an ultimate allied victory.

But they warned that suffering and stern times are ahead for freedom-loving people.

Preparation

Their remarks, formally opening the yuletide season in this country, were broadcast throughout the nation and internationally. They carried hope of ultimate liberation of the millions enslaved by the axis.

"There is another preparation demanded of this nation beyond and beside the preparation of weapons and materials for war," the president said.

"There is demanded of us also the preparation of our hearts; the arming of our hearts. And when we make ready our hearts for the labor and the suffering and the ultimate victory which lie ahead, we shall be ready to meet the Christmas day with all its memories and all its meanings—as we should."

"Churchill said grimly that 'by our sacrifice and daring' the children of the world 'shall not be robbed of their inheritance of peace, the right to live in a free and decent world.'"

"Evil Thing"

Both placed full responsibility for the Second World War upon the axis.

The president branded the tripartite alliance "this evil thing."

"Against enemies who preach the principles of hate and practice them, we set our faith in human love and in God's care for us and all men everywhere," he declared.

Churchill said:

"It would be for us this Christmas if we were not sure that no greed for the lands or wealth of any other people had led us to the field. That no vulgar ambition, no sordid lust for material gain at the expense of others have led us to the field."

From both men came urgent insistence that hands still free to do so pay usual homage to the King of Norway, who is a heritage not to be denied, especially to little children, they said.

"Let the children have their night of fun and laughter; let the gifts of Father Christmas delight their thoughts; let us share to the full in their untroubled pleasure, before we turn again to the stern tasks in the year that lies before us," said Churchill.

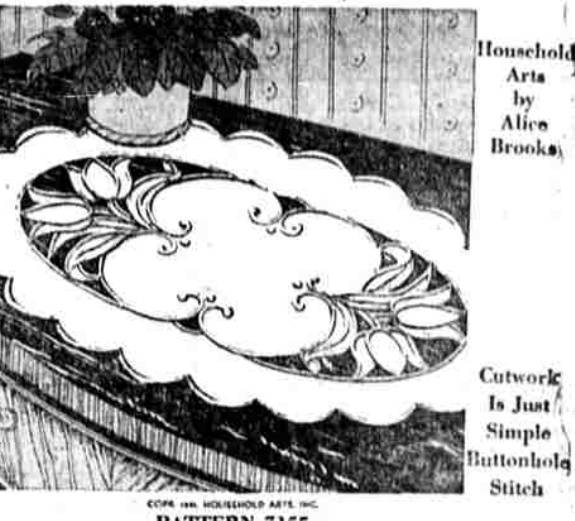

Mr. Roosevelt introduced the prime minister, describing him as one of the great leaders of nations and peoples fighting "in a great cause," the president said.

Prince Olaf

"He and his people have pointed the way in courage and in sacrifice for the sake of little children everywhere."

The two statesmen appeared side-by-side on the south portico. With them were Crown Prince Olaf of Norway, Princess Martha and their three children, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and her dancing protegee, Mayris Chaney. A vigilant secret service moved

Advantage That Will Diminish

AMERICANS fighting in the Far East are confronted with a foe that is experienced in war that has been raging for centuries in that area for many years.

With the exception of a few older officers, the Americans were wholly without actual combat experience when the war started. Practice, it can well be imagined, is very different from the real thing in war.

Japan has been at war for years with China. Its land and air forces, particularly, have had opportunity for seasoning experience. No doubt the Japanese, in their assaults on the American-held islands in the Far East, have had upon many of their experienced fighting men to cope with the Americans who are still rookies in the war game.

This is an advantage that will diminish as time goes on. Americans have never been slow about learning. They don't like the "dirty business," as Mr. Roosevelt calls it, but they proved in 1917 and 1918, and they will prove again, that once in it they can put into fighting the same vigor, the same resourcefulness, the same aptitude for learning, that they put into work and play at home—work and play that has made the United States pre-eminent in the fields of both production and recreation.

In the meantime, the Japanese advantage of experience should not be overlooked in weighing the factors in this struggle. As for the future, expect the Americans to give an increasingly good account of themselves.

Save That Paper

A STATISTIC that startles but is obviously true is the OPM report that three-fourths of the paper produced in the United States is burned.

This enormous waste, generally practiced without ill effects in peace time, should have no place in the economy of a nation at war and a nationwide effort is being made to stop it. Paul Mallon, in his pertinent suggestions on this page to citizens who wish to help in the war effort, proposed the other day that every citizen begin now to save paper, selling it or turning it over to public or semi-public agencies engaged in a paper-saving effort.

In Klamath Falls, a waste paper campaign has been started by the Boy Scouts, and we now have the machinery set up to save paper. At no time in the year is there a greater volume of waste paper in every home than just after Christmas, and now is the time to get busy on this project.

Arrangements are being made by the Boy Scouts to collect the paper. Citizens who want to help in this effort should tie up old magazines and newspapers, and place loose paper in boxes. A telephone call to the Boy Scouts (dial 6918) will bring a truck to collect the paper.

Airbase Committee

PROBABLY no local civic committee in recent years has done so much work with so little publicity as is the case with the city-wide airbase committee, appointed late in the last summer by Mayor John Houston.

The nature of the committee's work was such that through most of its tenure there has been no opportunity for publicity. At the outset it was asked by a board of the army air corps to maintain silence, in the name of national defense. At no time has there been a possibility for publicizing the current work of the committee; what has been said has been largely in the nature of review. Now, with a state of war laying even more severe strictures on publicizing matters of this nature, the committee is still unable to report publicly on the full details of its efforts.

It has been suggested, however, that general comment is in order lest the public, being uninformed, be misled into the idea that nothing has been done to foster the development of aviation activity here by the airbase committee. This comment, it is expected, will appear in the shape of a year-end report to Mayor Houston from the committee. Details of this report which can be properly publicized will be given to the public through information mediums and should be of interest to the civic and air-minded citizens of the community.

Soldier Seriously Injured by Car on Sun Creek Mountain

Hilbert Nelson, 19, a soldier from California, received a compound fracture of the leg and a possible skull fracture when he was struck by an automobile driven by Norman Augustine of Redmond at 6:15 Wednesday night on Sun Creek mountain.

Nelson and a group of other soldiers were parked at the road side fixing a flat tire. The youth stood in the middle of the road in an attempt to flag the coming car of Augustine for aid. Augustine, blinded by the lights of the stalled car, kept coming toward Nelson and when he did see him it was too late to avoid striking him down. The Redmond driver rushed the youth to the Klamath Valley hospital, where he was treated.

Another Christmas eve accident happened on Blaine street when Mrs. Joe Marcone slipped on the ice pavement and fractured her left leg. She was also treated at the Klamath Valley hospital.

War or Peace

Do not mourn this annual season of peace, because there is no peace. For many years there has been no peace and no prospect of peace. Now again there can be hope, because we war for peace.

Psychology

The White House was in no way pushed by premature publication, into making the announcement Monday night. The news was issued for the reason it would have upon the rest of the world—particularly France, Turkey and Portugal. In the modern subtle diplomatic maneuver it was France against the Axis, and the United States against the Axis, and the United States against the Axis, and the United States against the Axis.

Speculation Free

A tone unexcited casualness prevailed the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting (as suggested by their faces in the official photographs). No tense sub-officials were around to transmit guiding speculation reports. In fact all American frontals looked their doors and hid under their desks for the duration of the visit.

In the absence of such authoritative guidance, speculation was allowed to take its course, although no one could know or pretend to guess in any worthwhile degree what was being done. Natural subjects for first speculation were: Joint naval assignment in the Atlantic if the French fleet was stolen; dispositions of our planes to the Philippines, Singapore, Russia, Libya, Britain; the joint overall command (which came amount to much except a routine or perhaps regional service lacking singhanded power).

Only effective overall control will be extended by the two men themselves, no matter what kind of supplemental cooperation is conceived.

Chosen Spot

One spot where General MacArthur preferred to fight above all others, is the one chosen by the Japs for their first mass landing—Lingayen bay. That is where MacArthur has been holding the field maneuvers of his Filipino army for the last few years. He and his men knew every inch of it.

His Filipinos may not stack up so high with artillery. They do not have the physical size or knock of handling the big guns. But give them a machine gun and a bush in which to hide it, and they are a formidable foe.

WEAK STOCKS PUT BRAKE ON OTHER ISSUES

NEW YORK, Dec. 26 (AP)—Scattered weak spots, including American telephone, which lopped off more than five points at the worst, put brakes on rallying tendencies in other sections of today's market.

Volume approximated 1,300,000 shares.

The slide in telephone, which put this bellwether not far from its bottom of 1938, was attributed to persistent thoughts that a cut in the company's long-dated dividend was a possibility in view of climbing costs of operation, taxes and the inability to lift rates sufficiently to bridge the gap.

Aside from telephone, lagged shares were Western Union, General Motors, Johns-Manville and Douglas Aircraft.
