

Citizenship Proof Required of All Defense Workers

The Oregon State Employment service Friday revealed that employees in defense industries as well as job applicants must furnish proof of United States citizenship. The office also released instructions for securing birth certificates from applicants' home states.

The announcement follows: "The government requires that employees in defense industries furnish complete proof of United States citizenship. War department regulations have become increasingly strict, and at the present time, many previously accepted evidences of citizenship are no longer considered adequate.

"Every state has a bureau of vital statistics where births in that state are recorded. Read carefully the instructions herein for available records in your home state. Request a certified copy of your birth certificate, and ask that they indicate thereon when it was filed. Be sure to give your full name, date and place of birth, your father's full name, and your mother's maiden name (her name before marriage). Also, request forms for completing or correcting the record if it lacks your given name. Enclose a money order for the fee shown—do not send stamps, cash, or a personal check. (Many states charge a fee for searching even though they have no record.) If you will send your request by air mail and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, you should receive a prompt reply.

"Should the information given for the state in which you were born state that there is no record available, report to the Oregon State Employment Service for further instructions. Also, if it is indicated that there should be a birth certificate in your home state, and in answer to your request you are notified that your birth is not recorded, you must bring this notification with you to the employment service for further directions.

"If you have been adopted or have changed your name by legal procedure, the birth record should be accompanied by a certified copy of the court order changing your name."

SURRENDER OF HONGKONG BIG JAP TRIUMPH

LONDON, Dec. 27 (AP)—The Christmas day surrender of British Hongkong was a considerable strategic triumph for the Japanese, informed a source frankly conceded Friday.

Word that the garrison's remnants, with only meager water supplies left, had finally yielded was received here almost thankfully by most Britons. They had been expecting the capitulation but there still were no details of Hongkong's last hours under the Union Jack.

Informed sources said these advantages were gained by the Japanese in seizing the century-old British bastion off the south China coast:

1. An important refueling supply and repair base halfway between Japan and the coveted riches of British Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies.

2. Elimination of Britain's foothold on the China coast which would have served eventually as an allied springboard for an attempt to oust the Japanese from the entire Canton river area and thus open a new supply route to the Chungking regime.

3. Absolute domination of the mouth of the Canton river, and thus security from the rear! The Japanese decide to start a new thrust northward against the Chinese.

4. Valuable additional facilities for dispatching more Japanese landing forces to the Philippines. Manila is only 600 miles from Hongkong.

In Canada an anxious nation awaited more details on the fate of the Canadian troops who fought beside the British and Indians. Casualties were known to have been heavy.
