Science Gives Milady Hint On Thrifty Use of Perfume

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 5 (AP)—Be scientific, girls, and wear your perfume behind your ears.

"Odors travel best in a humid atmosphere," Dr. Ralph Bienfang, University of Oklahoma pharmacy professor whose scent collection has won national attention, contended today at a forum discussion.

"There is a humid, protected situation behind the ear," he went on, "as illustrated by the expression 'He's not dry behind the ears yet.'"

Dr. Bienfang, having given his idea of the best place for perfume, then went on to say fur was the worst, emphasizing:

"You might as well pour it on a rug."
The professor insists the flavor of food is not conveyed by the tongue but "posteriorly, through smell."

And that gave him another argument for his humidity-odor theory.

"Add that fact to the relationship between humidity and smell," he asserted, "and you have the reason the people of New Orleans are culinary-conscious while Esquimaux would just as soon eat tallow candles."

Dr. Bienfang contends the importance of sense of smell is sadly underrated.

"Children are educated in the use of all their senses except smell," he commented.

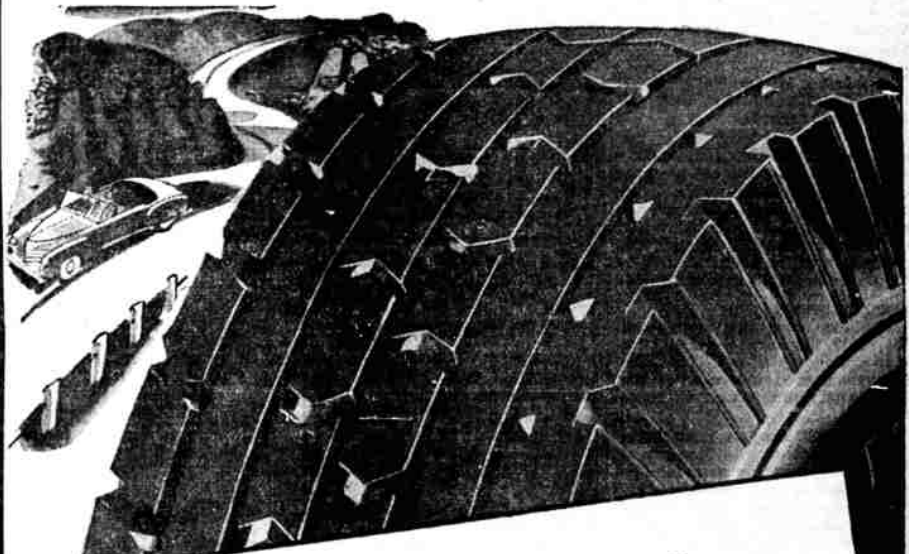

"But the dairymen always smells milk before he buys it. The physician sniffs the air when he enters a sickroom. And I understand that in the federal bureau of investigation school here peace officers were taught to recognize various gases by their odors."
