British front-line dispatches described the jungle conflict as a scene of carnage, reporting: "The slaughter of Japanese in some areas of Malaya is unbelievable. Concentrated British fire has mowed down wave after wave of them and whole detachments have been blown to pieces."

Domel said the British were heavily destroying bridges and roads and that troops in southern sectors of Selangor state were joining in the retreat toward the state of Negri Sembilan, south of Kuala Lumpur.

British Far East headquarters said a violent all-day battle raged yesterday in the Slim river sector, 50 miles above Kuala Lumpur, as waves of tank-paced Japanese infantry attacked on the main road to Singapore.

Heavy casualties were reported on both sides. The outcome of the battle was not disclosed, but earlier reports said the British were "holding fast" in their newly-formed lines.

Singapore dispatches acknowledged that the Mikado's invasion hordes still were infiltrating through Selangor state, in a wilderness of mangrove swamps and steaming jungles southwest of the main battle sector, threatening Kuala Lumpur and the British rear.

Approximately 100 persons, some equipped with snowshoes and skis, joined Sheriff Glenn C. Penland in a widening search for the missing crewman, identified by army officers only as Second Lieut. Wolking.

Letter Traced to Wake Island PORTLAND, Jan. 9 (AP)—Former Gov. Ben Olcott knows for sure now that his son, Ensign Chester W. Olcott, was describing the fighting on Wake Island in a letter received Monday.

The senior Olcott said he was sure the letter was from Wake, but he couldn't imagine how it had reached the mainland. The navy reported yesterday that dispatches had left the mid-Pacific island December 20—the day Olcott's letter was written—by plane.

"It's not by any means a one-sided affair," young Olcott wrote. "This outfit will never give up."

Margaret Landry believes "Mr. Hays is just silly to think sweaters are immoral" — and 5000 American soldiers agree with her.

Likewise, some dozen or so hardboiled New York photographers who in less than an hour yesterday took more pictures of Margaret in her sweater than have been taken of Winston Churchill on his entire American visit.

Margaret, 19, brunette and definitely cuddlesome, won the title "America's official sweater girl," over 5000 contestants in a nationwide competition held by a knitwear association. Her reward, besides honor and glory, was a $500 defense bond and a 10-day Broadway whirl.

"Wearing a sweater is really patriotic," Margaret said in a heavy southern drawl — she comes from Baton Rouge, La. — "because it pleases the soldiers."

To prove her point Margaret hauled out a batch of fan mail, about 5000 letters she received from soldiers, sailors and marines, far and near, since her contest victory was announced a few weeks ago.

"I get hundreds like this one every day," she said, picking out one at random.

Sgt. T. E. Wells, Camp Beauregard, La., "On behalf of the whole dandied camp," discussed Margaret and her sweaters for three paragraphs and concluded:

"Girls as beautiful as you make this country worth fighting for." "You see," Margaret said, "the soldiers are right. Mr. Hays is just silly to think sweaters immoral. Nobody can say college girls are immoral and every college girl has a closet full of sweaters."

RUSSIANS CRACKING SEVASTOPOL SIEGE

(Continued from Page One) ing forth and crushing the German's own siege positions. Dispatches from Kuibyshev, the alternate soviet capital, said the Sevastopol garrison broke out and launched a violent offensive when the Germans withdrew some of their siege forces to combat the Russian counter-invasion from the Kerch peninsula.

Sea-borne Russian troops were said to be landing at many points, east and north of Sevastopol, while the Sevastopol garrison itself drove the Germans back from the south.

Meanwhile, Premier Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski of the Polish government-in-exile declared in London that the next months would see the Germans hurled back to a defense line anchored at Smolensk, 210 miles west of Moscow, and said he had information that 12 of the 22 Panzer divisions Hitler sent into Russia had been wiped out.

Crossing of the Beresina in early November. HITLER has recently had a falling out with his generals and fired most of them, assuming complete command himself. Rumors are filtering out that Hitler's generals advised caution, as did Napoleon's.

But Hitler, like Napoleon, was in too much of a hurry for caution. He may now be paying the price for his haste.

CAKE URGES THRIFT IN ROTARY SPEECH

Urging thrift and economy to keep the government as well as the people of the United States on an even keel during the present crisis, Ralph Cake of Portland, republican national committee man for Oregon and first vice president of the United States Savings and Loan league, spoke before members of the Klamath Falls Rotary club Friday at noon. C. S. Robertson was chairman of the day.

Cake said he was not revealing facts which were unknown to people of the United States, but he felt that the blow to Pearl Harbor would put this country "back a year," and that diligence, thrift, economy and the maintenance of a high morale were needed now more than at any time in the history of this country.

"We need more guns, more ships, more planes, more of everything that goes into the creation of defense, and we need to keep plugging along at the normal things of life in order that, in the long run, our goal of winning this war may be realized," Cake stated.

He stressed the need of ending an "era of spending and relying on somebody else," and observed that in his opinion when this nation got under way it would see, as never before, the busiest days of its history.

House Passes Bill On Daylight Saving

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 (AP)—The house passed today, on a standing vote of 67 to 20, a daylight-saving bill ordering a uniform one-hour advance of the nation's clocks.

The senate previously had approved a bill giving the president discretion to move the clocks ahead as much as two hours. The differences between the two versions were expected to require appointment of a conference committee to shape the legislation into its final form.

Under the house bill, the one-hour time advance would begin 20 days after enactment and remain in effect until six months after the war ended.

Daylight saving legislation was requested by President Roosevelt as a means of conserving electricity.

Tokyo Sounds Possibility of Invading U. S.

(Continued from Page One) paper went on, "it will be for us to say when, where and how we will strike." "Today, without doubt," the Times and Advertiser said. "Japan has the most powerful navy in the world and the largest fleet of merchant vessels and her land forces, allied with those of Germany and Italy, can crush any combination of armies."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 (AP)—Talk in Tokyo about the possibility of a Japanese invasion of the United States stirred not a ripple of apprehension in American military circles today.

Japan, it was noted, is now engaged in a military gamble 2000 miles from home in its attempt to seize the entire southwest Pacific forces can reinforce their defenses.

Invasion of the United States would have to follow success of this gamble, together with destruction of the United States fleet, capture of Hawaii and at least the neutralization of Alaska, military men said.

According to O. E. Thompson of the United States Employment service who returned here Friday from Lakeview, the blaze completely razed the vital power plant of the 40-man mill. It was believed the mill would be down for at least two months until replacement parts could be shipped and the burned portion of the plant rebuilt.
