Warehouse, Dairy Workers Eye Union

Negotiations toward renewal of Klamath Falls union warehouse and dairy workers' contracts are under way, Earl Edsall of the AFL Teamsters' union announced Thursday. Edsall said that meetings will be held on a state-wide scale before new agreements are signed. He said that wage scales and working conditions will be among the problems discussed by representative employer and employe groups.

Present local warehouse union contracts expire on April 1, Edsall stated, while dairy agreements run until June 1.

Recruit Comes Up With Definition

FT. KNOX, Ky.—During a bull session at the armored force school, someone asked, "What's the definition of a 'peep'?" (That much discussed and misnamed blitz buggy).

One of the serious recruits who had absorbed everything he had heard replied: "A number 14 roller skate, equipped with motor, mud guards, windshield and a place to seat two heels instead of one!" And never cracked a smile!

Comic Opera in English To Close Concert Season In Klamath Monday Night

Last of a series of concerts to be presented here through the Klamath Community Concert association is scheduled for Monday, March 18, at 8 o'clock at the Pelican theatre when Mozart's enchanting comedy, "The Marriage of Figaro," will be given in English by the Nine O'Clock Opera company.

"The Marriage of Figaro" has long been a favorite with American theatre goers and now that it is to be produced in English by a group of young, gifted American singing-actors, the popularity of the comedy is expected to soar even higher. Since it was performed in 1786, "The Marriage of Figaro" has been enjoyed the world over. Gems from the opera are treasured by all music lovers. Sung in English, however, "Figaro" is great comedy as well as great music. Its gay but complicated plot is made clear and good fun in a translation of wit and point.

"Public performance forbidden by the police"—such was the decree in Eighteenth century Paris against Beaumarchais' rollicking and now classical comedy, "The Marriage of Figaro." However, the work was not condemned on account of moral scruples—it was condemned because it too truthfully revealed the life of the nobility. "The Marriage of Figaro" thus took on the charm of forbidden fruit and private "rehearsals" were given at which distinguished persons, including Marie Antoinette herself, delighted in being present.

As the story goes, the count would pilander with Susanna, maid to the countess, but his male servant, Figaro, to whom Susanna is betrothed, impudently confounds his master's intentions. There follows a maze of plots and counter-plots—mysteriously locked doors—anonymous letters—boys impersonating girls—hiding under sofas and leaping through windows—until the complicated plot is finally resolved in the castle garden. There the lusty wooings of the count are brought to bay and all proper lovers are properly united.

Monday night's performance ends the 1941-42 concert series. Also on Monday the 1942-43 membership campaign gets underway and the fact that next year's membership will be bigger than ever is a forgone conclusion. Music lovers throughout America and the rest of the world steadfastly believe that now, more than ever in our lives, it is necessary to keep burning the finer arts such as music and drama.

"The Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo" is the highlight of next year's program. All residents of the county and basin area are invited to membership. Campaign headquarters open Monday morning in the Willard hotel, it was announced by Dr. F. Cecil Adams, president, and Mrs. Lester Offield, membership chairman.

AAUW Dinner Plan Completed for Parrish Address

Arrangements have been completed for the dinner to be held Wednesday, March 18, by the American Association of University Women, at which Phil Parrish, Portland newspaper man, will be the chief speaker.

The public is invited to the no-host dinner, and reservations may be made at the Willard hotel, where the event will be held at 6:30 p. m.

Parrish is editor of the editorial page of the Oregonian. He writes many of that paper's editorials on the foreign and international situations, and is a specialist in northwest history. He is author of two books on the latter subject.

Music features will include a solo by Mrs. Winnifred Gillen, accompanied by Mrs. Raymond Cooney, and selections by a string ensemble composed of Mrs. J. C. O'Neill and Mrs. George Massey Jr., violinists; Rols Logan, who plays the viola, and Mrs. George McIntyre on the piano.

Frank Jenkins will introduce Parrish.

Taxpayers Line Up At State Income Tax Headquarters

Conscientious Klamath taxpayers lined up early Friday morning in the county courthouse to get their state income taxes figured up and off their minds two weeks before the deadline.

Leo Schottler, state tax commission representative, will be in the courthouse until April 1, to assist persons in making out their tax reports. State income tax returns must be mailed to the state tax commission at Salem by April 1.

Lava Beds Road Work Considered

Superintendent E. P. Leavitt, Assistant Superintendent Thomas Parker and Engineer George Hopper of Crater Lake national park, were in Klamath Falls Thursday meeting with representatives of the reclamation and fish and wildlife service on matters connected with road work in the Lava Beds national monument.

Preliminaries in connection with the construction of the northeast approach road to the Lava Beds monument were discussed.

Groesbeck Says Schools Should Stress Own Fields

Oregon's higher schools should devote their energies to developing their present major fields, rather than waste them on attempts to expand into others, R. C. Groesbeck, Klamath Falls, a member of the state board of higher education, told the Kiwanis club Thursday noon.

Groesbeck in particular discussed the situation at Oregon State college, which he said could and should be developed into one of the nation's leading technical schools. Many college supporters, he said, are eyeing liberal arts or commercial school expansion for the college, whereas the institution's greatest opportunity lies in attaining the heights in its own technical fields, such as engineering.

The higher education board member discussed the recent action of the board in restoring science courses to the University of Oregon. He stated this action was virtually committed at the time Dr. Donald Erb accepted the position of university president, but was delayed four years. It was necessary, he said, to make the University of Oregon a rounded-out institution on a standing with other universities.

Percy Murray, Kiwanis past president and an alumnus of Oregon State college, presided as chairman of the day. Murray stated that the college has been for too long a time without a president, and said the board should take care of this matter at the earliest possible time.
