20 TEACHERS GET PLACES ON TENURE LIST

Twenty Klamath county school teachers who this month completed their third year of satisfactory service in the Klamath county school district, have been added to the permanent tenure list. Under the teacher tenure law in effect in the county, teachers go through a three-year "probationary" period, and are then automatically retained in the school district as long as their work is satisfactory, or until they wish to leave.

The 15 elementary teachers listed as now on permanent tenure are: Lucile H. Mains and Ruby Arnett of Bonanza; Doris E. Cooper, at Weyerhaeuser camp and Rose O'Leary of Fairhaven; Imogene Boothby, Echo Smith and Laverne Doty of Shasta; Lorraine Stevens of Malin; Maxwell Marvin and Betty H. Evans of Henley; Marguerite Arcasa of Chiloquin; George R. Hobbs of Sprague River; Isabel Kerr and Louise Swemmelar of Altamont elementary school, and Elbert Wattenburg of Altamont junior high.

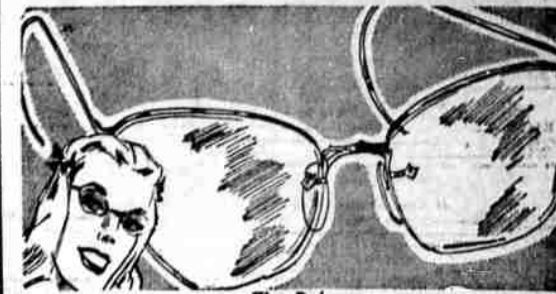

The five high school teachers are: Stanley Glick and Helen E. Dumbeck of Henley; Carol J. Loosley and Irving N. Wiley of Chiloquin, and Helen E. Hoffman of Sprague River.

Tests have been completed for the navy by the bureau of standards on an instrument panel indicator which warns the pilot at a glance as soon as any spark plug fails to function properly.
