

JAMES F. NOEL, PIONEER HOTEL OPERATOR, DIES

One of Klamath's early day hotel operators, James Frederick Noel, died in Portland Monday, according to word received here. Noel's passing occurred on the 78th anniversary of his birth.

James Frederick Noel was born April 27, 1864, in Marshall, Ind., the son of James and Ruth Noel, pioneer farmers of that section. In 1908, Mr. Noel, with his wife and children, Nina and Paul, came to Klamath Falls where he purchased property where the Catholic church and school now stand, and also considerable acreage in the Bonanza country.

Within a year the Noels were operating one of the landmarks of the little city on Link river, known as the Marshall House, situated in one of the frame buildings still standing on Main street near the bridge. The ground floor was occupied by Virgil's furniture store, the upper floor by Noel's restaurant and hotel.

After remaining in this location for 10 years, the Noels moved to Fourth and Main street and operated the Marshall House which later was known as the Ewauna House where the Frank Wards lived. The property is now occupied by an oil station.

From this location the Noels moved to the present site of Roberts Hardware company on Main street, where the Marshall House was known for its fine cooking. Also a partner in this firm was Mrs. W. Crandall. This business was conducted until 1928.

Mr. Noel has lived for the past six years in Portland. He died in the Odd Fellows home there following a brief illness. He was a lifelong member of the Odd Fellows lodge and final services will be conducted by the local organization here.

Survivors include his daughter and son, Mrs. E.M. Bubb and Dr. Paul M. Noel of this city; four grandchildren, Virginia and Janice Bubb and Donald and Jimmy Noel. The Bubb girls will arrive here Thursday morning from the University of Oregon to attend their grandfather's funeral, which is under the direction of Ward's Klamath funeral home.

one to authorize sending Canadian conscripts anywhere in the world. (Hitherto, under election commitments of the present government, only Canadian volunteers could be sent abroad.)

With one significant exception, every province in the dominion votes overwhelmingly to send Canadian conscripts wherever the needs of war may require.

The exception is French-descented, still French-speaking Quebec, which votes nearly three to one AGAINST the proposal.

QUEBEC was settled by the French and conquered and taken over by the English, but for more than 200 years it has remained stubbornly French in its language, its customs and its thinking.

Here is a thought for Hitler: If the people of Quebec, after more than two centuries of English rule, and many decades of KINDLY co-operation on the part of the enlightened dominion of Canada, are still not essentially Canadian enough to give their full and free co-operation to the Canadian war effort, what can Germany expect of the future support from the European countries she has conquered?

What can Japan expect of the Asiatic countries she is conquering?

IN the light of history, this is the answer: VERY LITTLE!

SINCE history was first recorded, many conquerors have had the idea that they could draw upon conquered peoples for ARMIES to protect themselves against their enemies and to make possible FURTHER CONQUESTS.

Seldom indeed have these hopes been realized.

This writer offers the prediction that in their present conquests Germany and Japan are storing up future trouble for themselves.

Highway Patrolman Cecil Fishburn told of seeing the storm approaching as he drove into town from Claremore.

Blinded by Rain

"I got into town just before the storm. Sheets of rain blinding persons along the street to the approaching clouds. I saw people huddled under awnings and in doorways to escape the rain and drove around trying to warn them."

"Many of them apparently were trapped under falling debris as the tornado struck."

Sheriff Don McElroy estimated that hundreds of parked cars were buried under the crashing buildings.

Self-Medication is Dangerous

The human body is the most complicated mechanism ever created. Not all of its processes are thoroughly understood even by those who devote their lives to the study of them. It is not surprising, therefore, that persons without medical training who attempt to diagnose and prescribe for their own serious illness often do themselves irreparable damage. Have respect for your body. You can never get another. When illness comes consult a physician . . . a licensed M.D. He is a specialist in his line just as we are in the business of filling his prescriptions.

High School Press Workers Describe City Jail Findings

cannot expect conditions to be any better considering the small amount the police department has to do with.

The only way we can hope to clean this mess up is to get behind our city council and co-operate with it.

By Anita Gwyn

Again the city jail is found in a "deplorable condition of sanitation" by the Klamath county grand jury. The average taxpayer doesn't take it upon himself to investigate reports made by authoritative persons. The inside information is what is needed to convince the Klamath voter that the above assertion by the grand jury is true.

The women's cell is approximately 10 feet by eight feet at its widest point. Although we weren't allowed to enter the cell, it was possible to see that it accommodated three prisoners comfortably but at times there are as many as 15 occupants.

The electric lighting system is very good, but there is not one window in the room. Everyone with any medical knowledge knows that every creature needs fresh air and light from the great outdoors whether it is a prisoner, free man, or animal.

When the women are booked they are all placed in this one cell regardless of their condition which may range from intoxication to social diseases. The bed clothes are clean but they are not changed each time a new prisoner is brought in.

What the city jail needs is a receiving ward to separate the women, for diseases can be, and will be spread if something is not done to improve this feature.

Physical checkups are given weekly and the inmates' blood is tested for possible communicable disease. Every person is well taken care of in case of any illness.

Good medical care is what is needed but a lot of good it is going to do if the prisoners haven't a place to bathe for cleanliness is the base of good health. There is one shower in the entire jail and it is located in the women's cell. The only time the men get to clean up is when there are no women prisoners.

To all appearances and reports this cubicle is scrubbed every day but this does not necessarily result in a sanitary condition.

Altogether we find that the medical care is good but against this one favorable point we find that the ventilation system, lack of bodily cleanliness and sanitation, and inadequate room space are all against it.

We leave it up to the taxpayer to decide for himself what should be done but after reviewing the facts with an open mind, we see only one possible decision that can be made. The jail situation must be taken care of at once.

attack on the Norwegian coast." The German said 12 were shot down over Cologne alone.

A British communique acknowledged a "good many casualties," fires and widespread damage in the German night raid on Norwich (pop. 125,000.) Nine persons were missing in the debris of a bomb-smashed hospital; rescue workers were still digging in the wreckage for trapped victims at daylight.

Seven nazi messerschmitts also bombed and machine-gunned an English southeast coast town this morning.

Nazi Shakeup

In the Russian campaign, Stockholm dispatches reported that Adolf Hitler had cashiered Lieut.-Gen. Engelbrecht, commander of the 63rd German division, in a rage over soviet gains on the Finnish front.

These reports said a shakeup of the entire German command in Finland was imminent, with Hitler determined to check the Russian counteroffensive across the still frozen Lapland front and in Karelia, north of Leningrad.

A Moscow radio broadcast indicated that Russian troops had won control of the entire region around Lake Ilnen, 120 miles south of Leningrad, except for German pockets at Novgorod and Staraya Russa.

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

A FEW weeks ago, I had occasion to visit some friends of mine in Nebraska.

Nebraska certainly is a great State. I like Nebraska. I like those immense cornfields that seem to stretch from horizon to horizon. (Plenty of wheatfields in Nebraska, too.)

But the thing that interests me most about Nebraska right now is the very important social experiment the beer people started there several years ago.

Beer itself is naturally a beverage of moderation. Yet, all too often, people are inclined to blame beer wrongly for any misconduct of the customer or the proprietor in a place licensed to sell beer.

So, the brewers got together to see what they could do about this. They weren't really responsible for their retailers . . . in fact, they're not allowed to control retailers. But the brewing industry worked out a plan by which it cooperates with the public authorities to eliminate bad conditions in the minority of places whose conduct would reflect on the law-abiding majority.

The beer people urge proprietors of retail places to conduct them properly and to obey the law. They urge consumers to cooperate, and ask the public generally to report law violations to the authorities. They send warnings to careless retailers and if conditions are not corrected they take the case up with the authorities. Naturally the authorities and the public have welcomed this as an added force in building respect for law and order.

That program is now operating in many states — and with the Nation at war, brewing industry organizations cooperate with civil and military authorities to assure good conditions in beer outlets around the army camps and naval stations.

Somewhat, to me, that's a mighty important, public-spirited effort. I don't know of anything like it ever having been tried before. If people really help the brewers with that program they'll be doing a great thing for the country.

This is a Congressman

This is a Voter

The Congressman works for the voter.

This is a Dictator

This is a Dictator's subject

The subject works for the dictator—or else.

This is a Newspaper

It tells the voter what the Congressman is doing. It tells the Congressman what the voter wants him to do. If the Congressman does what the voter wants done, the voter can commend him. If he doesn't, the voter can vote him out of office—fire him.

In totalitarian countries, the people can't fire the dictators. They don't even know what the dictators are doing. They only know what the dictators say they are doing, in the propaganda sheets that tell only what the dictators tell them to say.

AROUND ELECTION TIME you see political messages urging you to vote for this candidate or that, because he stands for this policy or that. The candidate states his platform in the newspaper, for all the voters to see.

You may not agree with him. You don't have to vote for him. But you know what the candidate stands for.

AND YOU KNOW THAT IF HE DOESN'T LIVE UP TO HIS PROMISES, THE NEWSPAPERS WILL TELL YOU ABOUT IT.

Your Congressman is your representative. He votes in the way he thinks you would vote if you were in Congress. And it's your privilege to tell him, in advance of any vote in Congress, how you would vote and how you want him to vote.

Can you imagine a citizen of Berlin telling Hitler how to vote? Can you Imagine Hitler paying for an ad urging the Germans to elect him? Can you imagine a German newspaper telling Hitler that the people don't like what he's doing?

If those things ever happened, Hitler's dictatorship would be over. Dictatorship can't live in a system like ours, where newspapers are free to print the truth in the news and the editorial columns, and advertisers are free to print the truth in the advertising columns.

When business is better in this town everybody benefits. When everybody in the town knows what's going on all over the world, each man can tell better how to vote, what to buy and how to protect himself.

Read these ads each week. Tell your friends to read them. They tell you what an important part your newspaper has in helping you to know what's going on, so you can decide what you personally are going to do about it all.

The publisher of this paper wants to serve the community the best he possibly can. If you have any suggestions or questions or criticisms don't hesitate to write him a letter. It will receive personal attention.
