Bond Sales Lag

WAR savings bond purchases in Klamath county have fallen behind the schedule necessary if this county is to make the $149,000 quota set for it in May. This quota is a part of an Oregon quota assigned in a national drive. Klamath is expected to do its part in keeping Oregon in the forefront in defense bond purchases.

Several factors have slowed defense bond purchases here, among them the Japanese project construction at Tulelake. This work caused a considerable dislocation in local industry and upset systematic buying through the payroll allotment plan. Many people who had been buying bonds in this manner severed their local employment to take work on the Japanese project, and that stopped their bond buying so far as the local quota was concerned.

Unfortunately, indications of extravagance and waste in the building of the Tulelake project came generally to local attention and had a tendency to discourage bond buying by citizens not in any way connected with the construction project. The fact that no official source has been willing to state the costs on the Tulelake project has not helped the situation, but has added instead to a general belief that the costs are far too high. This newspaper reports these factors in the bond sale program and again asserts emphatically they should have no effect on the attitude of good citizens toward bond-buying. The first thing we have to do is to win this war, and bond buying is an essential part of that effort. We must not be distracted from the main purpose.

There is a feeling among war savings officials that while working people, generally, are carrying on their part of the bond purchase program through the payroll allotment plan, there is a need for stimulating sales again among professional and business people. It is suggested that everyone look up his bond-buying pledge made last February and make certain he is living up to that obligation.

WALSH CLEARED OF SPY ACCUSATION

WASHINGTON, May 21 (UP)—Chairman David L. Walsh, (D-Mass.) of the senate naval affairs committee, has been completely exonerated by the justice department of accusations printed in the New York Post that he frequented a Brooklyn "house of degradation" where nazi spies congregated, Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley told the senate Wednesday.

He said the entire incident was based on mistaken identity. He explained that the man who visited the house of ill repute was a resident of New England—but not of Massachusetts—and no more resembled Walsh "than I look like Halle Selassie." He did not identify the visitor by name.

"I shall see that justice is done for those who have made this most despicable accusation against a member of this body," he promised.

Walsh specifically was accused in the newspaper's dispatches of having visited repeatedly a house operated by a man named Gustav Hermann Beckman who was convicted of what Barkley described as an "offense too loathsome to mention in the senate or any group of ladies and gentlemen."

Lew Ayres Wears Army Uniform

FORT LEWIS, Wash., May 21 (UP)—Private Lew Ayres, no longer a conscientious objector, Wednesday was wearing the uniform of the United States army and getting accustomed to his new status.

Almost unnoticed, Ayres waited his turn in the Fort Lewis reception center lineups. Two months ago, describing himself as a "conscientious objector" Ayres was sent to the "Conchie" camp at Wyeth, Ore., but a few days ago asked a change of status. He has asked for assignment to a non-combatant medical unit.

"I really think I can do some good in the medical corps," said Ayres as he was going through army induction.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 21—Some annoying and damaging confusion is evident here and there among the people over our policy toward Russia, and what will come out of it after the war.

A number of very enthusiastic Americans, on one hand, seem to be accepting the delusion that Russia got into this war to save democracy. And there are an equal number of people on the other hand who cringe in fear of communism rising in this country as a result of the victory we are going to win.

Above all, in both groups, there are people who think the subject should not even be mentioned, either for fear of rocking the boat or offending Stalin.

To make the situation appear even more complex, domestic commies are coming out of the holes they entered while Russia was a passing ally of Hitler in Poland, and are disporting themselves in their publications again, advising us which Americans are loyal, what we should do about this and that.

None of these notions has any basis in the plain and simple facts of the case, which are apparently being forgotten. The realistic policy of this government has long been adopted, is delivering the goods to Russia better than expected, and is generally approved.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT

All you have to do to understand its ramifications and its restrictions is to recall the facts of how it came about. If you keep these facts in mind there can be no confusion, fear—or political agitation.

Fact one, is that Russia entered this war because she was attacked by Hitler. Before that she had worked Hitler's way. Russia is not a democracy. Primarily she is fighting for her existence.

We are fighting for our existence, a different kind of existence, but against the same enemy.

War must run always to the death, and in that kind of a situation, anyone who is not foolish will get every kind of help he can. Therefore, we have entered upon a joint venture which is, in effect, a mutually satisfactory partnership in war.

It is not political. We have no treaties. We are merely working together for our own self-interest in a life and death struggle.

Now this does not mean we must marry Russia. It does not mean we must adopt her form of government, now or later. If she had the form of government of the Fiji islands or Shangri-La, it would be the same.

The administration seems to me to have kept these distinctions very carefully and clearly. Mr. Roosevelt has pushed the goods over to them, furnished the credit, praised the great valor of the Russian army and completely avoided the confusing political angles.

If all citizens of this country had followed his example, there would be no reason for attempting now to clarify the situation.

Why the president freed Earl Browder, I do not know. I do not believe it was to please Russia, because no diplomat here suggests Stalin's diplomatic representatives ever concerned themselves with the Browder passport case.

As a matter of fact, Stalin's diplomats stay as far away as they can from the domestic communist party.

THERE LIES DANGER

Unfortunately, the domestic commies do not conduct themselves with the same restraint.

SIDE GLANCES

"Well, other men manage to tell their wives what goes on at the office! If you weren't the life of all the office parties, maybe you'd have more to say!"

Their publications seem to want to decide strictly American issues. If anyone says the Russians advanced only three miles instead of five, they are inclined to shout "fascist" at him.

Indeed, if allowed to run loose the way they are going, they will have us all believing before this war is over that they personally saved democracy, although all we are getting from them is critical advice. There lies our danger and there lies the cause of the confusion, not in the governments, and not in the policy.

If you meet those of this ilk in argument or in print, just remind them that Russia initially made the war possible by her treaty with Hitler and her actions in Poland; that we tried to help Finland when she was attacked by Russia; that neither political agitation nor false emotionalism will help either of us right now; that we both are in this matter for our own good reasons; that our governments seem to know it and are doing a darned good job of accomplishing victory without getting into sideline arguments.

If we keep things on that basis, no one will be fooled now or later.

HE ALWAYS COMES BACK

(Salem Capital Journal)
A contemporary remarks that the "outstanding surprise" of the Oregon primary election "was the shattering of tradition of invincibility which had long adhered to Walter M. Pierce, veteran congressman from eastern Oregon, even if he pulls through the 'unbeatable' label is torn from his banner."

Since the octogenarian Walter Pierce arrived in Oregon he has most of the time held or been a candidate for public office, either county, state or federal. He has been defeated many times but always came back for the same or some other office, generally successfully. The "unbeatable" label never was on his banner for defeat only spurred him to new endeavor. Look at his record:

Superintendent of schools, Umatilla county, 1886-90; county clerk, 1890-4, defeated for reelection. Member of the state senate, 1903-7, defeated for reelection, again senator from 1917-21, defeated for reelection, 1920. Democratic candidate for governor, 1918, defeated, again nominee in 1922, elected governor; again candidate in 1926, defeated. In 1932 elected to congress and since biennially re-elected and now re-nominated. In addition he was regent of the OAC from 1905-23.

Pierce's success as a politician is due to the fact that he always has his ear to the ground and oscillates at every popular tremor. He has a flair for theatricals and is a consummate actor and not bothered by consistency nor handicapped by principle and a champion of every emotionalism that is popular at the time.

WAR INDUSTRY BOOMS OREGON PAYROLL TOTAL

SALEM, May 20 (AP)—Booming war industries boosted Oregon's industrial payroll during the first four months of 1942 almost a third greater than during the corresponding period of 1941, the state industrial accident commission reported today.

The payroll for the four months totaled $88,055,034, compared with $60,377,655 in the first four months of 1941.

Multnomah county, with more than half of the state's industrial payroll, reported industrial pay checks totaling $46,831,545, almost double the $24,150,027 figure for the first four months of last year.

The state's industries paid $22,731,503 in wages during April, compared with $16,300,004 in April, 1941. Multnomah county's industrial payroll in April was $12,322,786, against only $16,491,786 in April, 1941.

Examiners Assigned To Check Violations Of Building Order

WASHINGTON, May 21 (AP)—Three thousand government examiners have been assigned to check on violations of the construction stop-order in all parts of the country, the war production board announced Wednesday.

The examiners, borrowed by WPB from the home owners loan corporation, will check building permits in every principal city and gather information from building supply companies, labor unions and any other available sources of information, WPB said.

KANSANS TERM GAS RATION 'ASININE'

TOPEKA, Kas., May 21 (UP)—Gasoline rationing for midwestern states is "nonsensical, unjustified, and asinine," is "pure bunk" and is based on "jealousy" by eastern states, the Kansas legislative council said Wednesday.

The council, an interim committee which serves between legislative sessions, adopted a resolution condemning the proposed extension of gasoline rationing to the middle and southwest.

The resolution was proposed by Rep. F. L. Hagman of Johnson county who said rationing constituted "a real and basic threat to the Kansas war program, economic life, and general business activity."

No fuel shortage exists in Kansas and other oil producing states of this region and rationing would be "nonsensical, unjustified and asinine," he said.

"Such a rationing program is the height of pure bunk," he added with the assertion that in the middle west, where distances between industrial centers are great, rationing would be disastrous to the war program.
