Protege of Buffalo Bill Gives Beauty Treatments To Shop Mannequins Here

"Broadway Bill" Birkmire, 63-year-old sculptor, world traveler and bronco buster, is at Montgomery Ward and company this week giving the store mannequins beauty treatments and general conditioning to make them last for the duration. Birkmire left home at the age of 11 to join up with "Buffalo Bill" Cody, and his life since then reads like an adventure book. Indeed, he has written and published such a book himself, on the life of "Buffalo Bill," who raised him from the age of 11, and sent him to Paris to study sculpturing when he was 21. "Broadway Bill" studied under the masters at that time along with Jo Davidson. In recent years he worked with Davidson again, on Will Rogers Memorial statues. He also worked with Gutzon

a reward for noble service well done. War is horrible enough now. It will always be horrible enough. But before the work started by Florence Nightingale in the Crimea and Clara Barton in our own bloody war between the states it was unbelievably MORE horrible.

DOWN through the long ages to their time, the soldier who escaped unscathed from battle was fortunate beyond the reasonable expectation of his kind. He who got off with only a flesh wound was only a little less so. The soldier who was killed cleanly was LUCKY.

The poor devils upon whom the hand of Mars fell with unmerciful weight were the severely wounded. Instead of an asset they became a LIABILITY. Their fate has been little touched upon by the historians, but it wasn't a pleasant one. Even Napoleon, undeniably great soldier that he was, abandoned his sorely wounded to their fate when he stole out of Moscow to begin his retreat. It remained for WOMEN to bring mercy to the wounded into war, and it was Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton who pioneered the task.

FROM somewhere these brave women—DOUBLY brave because they dared not only terrors of war but the equal terrors of violated CONVENTION—must be looking down on these girls who are going out with the convoys to carry on the work of mercy among the wounded. And as they look down their eyes must shine with pride.

ANYWAY, you can see why it is that the streets and the lobbies and the bars of San Francisco are gay, even if there is a strained note in the gay voices. It isn't only these uniformed nurses that are going out on the convoys. There are others—many, many of them.

In the minds of all is the thought: Who knows what tomorrow will be, so why not be gay today? And who would frown on their gayety?

ferred a stalemate," and he added: "I defy the enemy to land large forces in Australia." Coincidentally, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that the wrecks of three Japanese midget submarines destroyed in an unsuccessful attempt to attack Sydney harbor on Sunday had been located. Smashed by depth charges and artillery fire, two of the sunken hulks had already been recovered. Allied forces pressed the hunt for a mother ship which was believed to have launched the short-range submarines on their suicide mission within 300 miles or less from Australia's major city.

Relatives of Local Woman Drowned in Minnesota Mishap

Mrs. Emil Albrecht, Melrose street, Saturday received word of the tragic death of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Pagels of St. Cloud, Minn., who lost their lives when their small boat was caught in a sudden storm on Lake Milaca in northern Minnesota where they were spending Memorial Day weekend.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Pagels visited here four years ago at the Albrecht home. They were accompanied by their two children, Irwin Jr., 12, and Betty Jane, 8, both of whom survive. The Pagels and their son were in the boat fishing. It was late Friday evening and a sudden storm swept the lake and upset the small craft. Mrs. Pagels, 42, was unable to swim. Irwin Jr. clung to the boat anchor which in some manner was wrapped around the boat. Mrs. Pagels' body has been recovered but her husband's body has not been found, according to Mrs. Albrecht.

Mrs. Albrecht's younger sister, Mrs. John Hornick of Morris, Minn., will care for the two children, she has been advised. Mr. Pagels was chief clerk with the Great Northern railway located at St. Cloud.

the route of the Essen raiders indicated that the night's operations may have been of a magnitude possibly equalling the startling strength of the Cologne assault.

On a basis of comparison with the Cologne attack, Essen probably was deluged under about 6,000,000 pounds of incendiary and explosive bombs poured down from planes manned by 8000 fliers.

Canadian fliers, it was announced officially, again were at the controls of some of the giant four-engined Stirlings, Lancasters, Halifaxes and lighter Wellingtons and Hampdens.

Some of these planes, among them craft which were back in action after having been over Cologne in the RAF's first ponderous blow, can carry four tons of missiles.

ing flames. Others were bulging when the water reduced the heat and avoided danger of further explosion. The tank truck was destroyed. Another truck, parked nearby, caught on fire and was dragged away by a tractor.

The flames and rolling clouds of black smoke attracted many bystanders, who were ordered to a safe distance by city, state police, and sheriff's officers. Fire Chief Ambrose stated that had the flames continued out of control and touched off the bulk tanks, flaming gasoline from the big containers would probably have leveled that area of the suburbs, including the Swan Lake plant.
