Weekend Roundup

WARTIME precautions against giving information that might help the enemy will eliminate this year the public forecast of dangerous fire weather.

Good citizens will not need the forecast. From now until the general fall rains, all weather is dangerous fire weather. For various reasons, it is going to be one of the most dangerous fire seasons in the history of our western forests.

Citizens of the Midland Empire, where forests are a vital economic factor and a source of great pleasure, know what to do and what not to do as their part in the protection of their forests. This is the year to follow the code to the last letter.

Recent developments in the Pacific war point to the importance of early distribution of gas masks as announced several weeks ago by federal defense authorities.

The OCD this week distributed thousands of masks in key cities for use of air raid wardens and other defense workers. Presumably, no time will be lost in extending this distribution to the smaller cities in the coastal area.

In its announcement of several weeks ago, the OCD indicated more than 16,000 masks would be available for Klamath Falls.

There will be no firecrackers for Junior this year. Fireworks have been restricted or banned by law in many incorporated areas for years, but the regulations have been loosely obeyed. Oldsters, including the police, have been inclined to tolerance of this sort of fun, even when it required winking at city ordinances. As a matter of fact, a lot of oldsters like to shoot firecrackers, themselves.

But this year, there must be no violation of this rule, which has been strengthened and extended to the entire state under an edict issued by Lieutenant General John H. DeWitt of the western defense command.

Under executive order of the president, General DeWitt's orders carry the same force and effect as laws upon the statute books. Governor Sprague this week issued a statement reminding the public of the strict rule against fireworks of all kinds, and instructing law enforcement officers to make arrests if any violations occur.

While there has been official silence so far on the matter of extension of the Japanese war relocation project on Tule lake, it is apparent that such a program is being undertaken. The reason for official secrecy on the development is not apparent.

At the time the engineers were in this area making the first study of the site, it became clear that it offered many favorable features that would probably result in the location of a large re-location settlement. Now, with the settlement actually in operation, expansion is a logical development. All of the preliminary details are out of the way, and it is probably easier to build on a project already started than to inaugurate additional ones.

The camp started as a 10,000 population program. It was then raised to 11,000, and latest reports indicate from 16,000 to 18,000 colonists may occupy the colony.

It is to be hoped the agricultural program carried on through the project is carefully worked out with a view to its effect on the entire agricultural activity of this basin, and that methods may be developed whereby the presence of the colonists may assist in meeting the farm labor problem in this area this year. A plan that is fair to all concerned should be developed without difficulty, and it is to be hoped the WRA officials take the agricultural and civic organizations of the basin into their councils in working out such a program.

The coming week will be observed as Flag Week in Klamath Falls and Klamath county. It will be an occasion for displaying the flag and for re-dedication of spirit and activity to all it represents. —M. E.

FLYING TIGERS HIT JAPANESE TROOPS

CHUNGKING, China, June 6 (AP)—The Flying Tigers of the American volunteer group fighting in southwestern China killed more than 200 Japanese soldiers yesterday along the west bank of the Salween river in Yunnan province and along the Burma road by bombing and strafing, it was announced officially today.

During the month of May, the communique added, the AVG shot down 24 enemy pursuit planes in aerial combat, four more were probably shot down and 35 were destroyed on the ground. One enemy bomber, three observation planes and two transports also were reported shot down.

The American fliers also destroyed 87 enemy trucks, partly destroyed 11 more and smashed one enemy tank, the report said. The AVG lost six planes, five pilots were killed and one was wounded, the communique declared.

GREAT LAKES, Ill., June 6—Irvin Warner Jr., 19, son of Mrs. Sarah Warner, P. O. Box 1037, Merrill, Oregon, was graduated from the navy service schools here Wednesday, and will now be transferred to the fleet or a naval base to receive further experience as an aviation machinist's mate.

American Officers With Commandos

WASHINGTON, June 6 (AP)—American army officers are serving on the general staff of the British commandos, their commander, Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, has disclosed. The raider chief told reporters here yesterday that the colorful exploits of his men were the result of "combined operations" on the part of the British fighting services. The presence of American officers on the commando staff actually makes it an inter-allied combined staff, he added.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

WASHINGTON, June 6—The ardent liberal campaign to banish all so-called isolationists from public life in the midst of war was started by the New Republic magazine for reasons not clear at the time.

The implication was that they were unpatriotic. But an inspection of their voting records in congress since December 7 showed they generally supported every war measure and were not talking much. Actually they were no obstacle to the war effort.

When that reason thus fell down, other publications which took up the campaign, turned to the point that the isolationists should be exterminated because they opposed getting into the war before we got into the war. The liberals hammered that reason for a while, but it left matters just as much in the dark as ever, because Mr. Roosevelt opposed getting into the war before we got in.

His speeches and statements show this to have been his announced policy in his re-election. If that is the measure of isolationism, then the president was an isolationist and so were most of the people of the country.

Any real reason for the campaign continued to be unexplained until the New Republic's June 8 issue came out this week. Then it offered a good reason.

It said it was not socking isolationists because they were isolationists, but because most of them were against the new deal.

"The enemies of the new deal are the very ones who could keep us from winning the peace. This is an issue which must be fought and won on the domestic front, and it must be won while the war is being waged."

That clarifies the matter. The attack, it now appears, was timed all along for the primaries and the congressional elections, for domestic political reasons—which are fair enough in themselves. But such a clarification certainly requires the liberals to drop that fake mantle of patriotism under which they have been hiding this purely political sword.

The question then is whether the New Republic and associates are going to dictate the peace and future domestic politics after eliminating their political opponents from the discussion during the coming elections.

MOURNING
Mourning about the new tax bill is widespread among those who are making it and who may bring it out in about two weeks. Designed to curb inflation and raise $8,600,000,000, it does neither.

The government economists are clicking their teeth about it because it will make the nation's total federal tax bill about $24,000,000,000 a year, only about one-fourth of our national income and that income may go to $120,000,000,000 by the time the bill becomes effective. They all say it therefore cannot be a guarantee against inflation.

Mr. Morgenthau first asked for a $7,600,000,000 bill and then sent up supplemental requests which would bring it up to $8,600,000,000. As it stands now the bill would raise less than $6,000,000,000.

OPPOSED TO PHRASE
If a $2,000,000,000 sales tax were added, the revenue raising deficiency would be met, but the administration is inherently opposed even to the phrase "sales tax."

The bill does not touch those taxpayers in the lower third of the income tax brackets where most of the "excess income" is, the income which the administration economists fear will cause inflation.

Lower exemptions will touch this group lightly, but the committee agrees that many in the group are not accustomed to paying income taxes and did not get into the habit when the brackets were dropped last time, so they

Swimming, Camping, Use of High School Will Feature Summer Recreation Plans

Highlights of this summer's recreational activities for the youth of Klamath Falls will be the high school facilities, the swimming program, and the city-wide camping trip at Lake O' the Woods, according to plans completed by the city recreation committee and Dave Bridge, recreation officer. The program gets underway Monday.

Special arrangements have also been made by Miss Cavanaugh and the Girl Scout committee to conduct a day camp for non-scouts as well as Girl Scouts. This program will begin at Moore Park on June 16 and end August 16.

Men and women who have had long experience in youth work will be in charge of the activities. Joe Peak, present assistant football coach at KUHS heads the physical recreational program for the boys at the high school; Lillian Redkey, city school girls' physical education specialist, will be in charge of the girls' recreation.

Kelly Robinette, expert in woodwork and member of the high school faculty, has made elaborate plans in shop work for the boys and girls. Frieda Wheeler, an old timer in the education circles of Klamath Falls, will be in charge of arts and crafts at the high school; Mills school will find Gerald Clemens, for many years a teacher in the city schools, the man in charge. Clemens has served on the summer program for several seasons. Patricia Talbot, city school teacher, will be in charge of arts and crafts at Mills.

Through the courtesy of Butler's natatorium, arrangements have been made for swimming classes; boys and girls who attend the recreational centers will be given preference in this activity.

The main centers of the program, Klamath Union high school and Mills school, will close August 8th, when a large group of boys will leave for Lake O' the Woods for a week of camping. Upon completion of this week, the girls will take charge of the camp. Any boy or girl interested in the camping
