Flying Boat in Mass Production

This mammoth sea-going flying boat, the long range of which is a military secret, will transport military supplies to the far-flung war theatres of the United Nations.

It will be manufactured on a mass production basis by Nash-Kelvinator, former auto and household appliance manufacturing company, which rapidly is becoming an important unit in the wartime aircraft industry.

The famous Vought-Sikorsky airplane works have made two such four-motored flying boats to date by the hand-made method, and Nash-Kelvinator engineers have just finished production plans to make the plane on a mass production basis.

What it takes is plenty of Yankee ingenuity when Army, Navy and Marine forces move in to establish new bases on some South Pacific islands. Here, in a U. S. Navy photo, wire mats are being laid down by Army and Navy engineers so heavy equipment will not bog down in sand.

Sprague River Sees Demonstration of Trailer on Its Own

SPRAGUE RIVER—What happens when a logging trailer decides to take off in a different direction from the truck was graphically illustrated last Friday, when a logging truck driven by Aivin Decker came apart on the main street of Sprague River.

Motorists who were driving by observed the load of logs almost directly across the street. The truck was going at a slow speed and Decker was able to stop as soon as he suspected trouble. Had the truck been going at a high speed, it is possible that considerable damage would have been done, bystanders said.

Ed Mays, blacksmith at the mill, was summoned and brought a Hyster, a vehicle that lifts large loads of lumber, to the scene. With the aid of various helpers, the two disagreeing parts were chained together and the load was slowly brought to the mill pond less than one half mile away.

McKenzie Ranch Sold to Shepherds

SPRAGUE RIVER—A real estate transaction of local interest was the recent sale of the Ivan McKenzie dairy ranch and property to Mr. and Mrs. Cy Shepherd of this city. The property, located on the east border of town, includes pasture land, farm buildings and a residence.

It is understood that Shepherd will not continue in the dairy business here but will use the property for a farm home.

The McKenzies have lived in the Sprague River area for a number of years and are well known in this section. They had four children in the school and were prominent in local affairs. McKenzie was coach of the "Townies" basketball team for some time.

The McKenzies have moved to Redmond, where it is understood they will operate a farm and possibly another dairy.

Sprague River Women Do a Man's Job in Mills

SPRAGUE RIVER—"The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world" goes an old saying, which may be altered to read, "is the hand that helps defeat the Axis" as far as Sprague River women are concerned. Many are going into employment in the local mill to help solve the labor shortage.

The mill, with some of the largest orders in history, was faced with the same problem of workers as many mills. There had been no women workers in the local plant, but the necessity of finding help has prompted mill authorities to sign the women up to help out till the boys come marching home.

The women have plugged up these shortages in help and today may be seen feeding small saws, tallying off cut-off saws, tallying lumber and numerous other jobs formerly done by men.

reduced shipments from other Pacific areas. We must share sugar with our allies. We must also use sugar to manufacture ammunition.

One big reason why sugar can be spared for home canning is the beet sugar industry here in the West. Production of this home-grown sugar is over 100% greater now than it was during the last war.

Refined to sparkling purity, home-grown beet sugar is identical with any other top-quality sugar. It is just as white. Just as fine in grain. Just as sweet to taste. An ideal sugar for all your home canning!
