During the year the group has had several special speakers from Klamath Falls who have given talks on various phases of the work.

Another speaker was Miss Reed of Klamath Falls, who spoke on the necessity of the study of dietetics during these times when the proper development of the body is so important.

BUMPER HAY CROP SEEN FOR SPRAGUE

SPRAGUE RIVER—With an unusually heavy rainfall for the spring, local farmers are looking forward to a bumper hay crop for the following year if the flood waters subside and give the grass a chance to grow.

This year Sprague river stayed high an unusually long time and even now pasture lands that are ordinarily on their way toward the harvesting stage are submerged. Heavy snows on Gearhart mountain and the large drainage area of the Sprague river have been sending down torrents of melted snow water and the river is still considered at flood stage.

Each year this area produces hundreds of tons of meadow hay and thousands of cattle are wintered here. When the waters subside and the grass starts to grow farmers are anticipating a crop seldom seen in this country. Among the larger producers of hay in this area are Charles Drew, Douglass Hess, Dice Crane, Sylvan Crume, Joe Viera, Roy Gienger, Dave Skeen and Vincent Bodner.

Tulelake Lad Gets His Scrap Rubber To Town on a Horse

TULELAKE—That there is more than one way to get scrap rubber to town was proved by a small Tulelake lad Tuesday who had a tire to turn over to his country. Reluctant to give his name, he admitted, however, that he had tried rolling it along a country road and finding that slow business, had returned home for a steed. The tire mounted around his horse's neck, he made a second start to sell his wares. Tulelake service station operators were a bit disappointed at the response to the call for scrap, with only two of five stations reporting any appreciable amount. The Shell station had taken in a total of 2300 pounds by Tuesday night, according to Dean Marcum, station employe. Associated ran second, with 1035 pounds. It was announced by Henry Krupka, local distributor. A. G. Prince at the Richfield station had collected 312 pounds, and the Gresham Motor company and Lepley Motor company, each without scales for weighing, had lesser amounts that had been donated.
