Adams of this city, in a ceremony read at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June the seventeenth, in Holy Trinity Episcopal church in Spokane.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a powder blue suit with a long torso jacket trimmed with soutache braid. Her blouse and small veiled bonnet were of cafe au lait and she wore navy blue slippers and gloves. A white prayer book with a small spray of sweet syringa and pink rosebuds was carried by the bride.

The groom wore the navy blue of the United States navy air corps.

Lohengrin's processional was played by the organist as the bride walked to the flower banked altar. Just before the ceremony tall white candles were lighted. Sprays of pink and white snapdragons decorated the church.

Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple cut their white tiered cake which was later served by Mrs. Hart. Close friends of the bride presided at the punch bowl and coffee urn and assisted about the rooms. Receiving with the bride and groom were their mothers. Mrs. Hart wore a print frock with a gold jacket and a yellow rosebud corsage. Mrs. Adams wore navy blue with matching accessories and white roses.

Ensign Adams, who was recently commissioned at the naval air field at Corpus Christi, Texas, on June the ninth, will report for duty as flying instructor on June the twenty-sixth. His bride will accompany him and they will be at home this month in that city.

This is going to be a difficult job for the judges as each of the seven is exceptionally attractive.

Service For Women

Branches of WANS or WAAC Open to Nation's Ladies

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP)—The feminine question soon may be "To be a WANS or a WAAC?"

Those tens of thousands of disappointed candidates for the Women's Auxiliary Army Corps officer training school can take renewed heart. The navy shortly may be signing up volunteers in a Women's Auxiliary Service.

The senate naval affairs committee today begins considering a bill introduced by Senator Walsh (D-Mass.) to place women in non-combat shore jobs, thus releasing men for more active duty.

This bill, which makes the auxiliary a branch of the naval reserves, does not go as far as a bill, sponsored by Rep. Maas (R-Minn.) and already passed by the house, which would take women right into the navy.

While the two branches of congress seek agreement on whether the future blue-jackettes are to be "in the navy" or "with the navy," the navy department went ahead with discussions and plans setting up the corps so as to be ready when it is created.

As head of the new auxiliary the admirals and captains were understood to favor a woman experienced as a dean or president of a women's college. One of those mentioned in this connection was Dr. Mildred H. McAfee, president of Wellesley college.

It was learned that Dr. McAfee and Dr. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard college, conferred yesterday with officials at the navy department. Other women college administrators also have been here in conference as the tentative plan is to set up training schools on college campuses.

An eastern college—Smith and Vassar have been spoken of—is under consideration as a training center for the officers, and a mid-western university for the enlisted personnel.

Under terms of the Walsh bill the women would get the same pay as sailors of comparable grade. They wouldn't be issued uniforms as are the WAACS, but a clothing allowance of $200 would be given the enlisted personnel, and $250 for officers.

The salaried would be restricted to shore duty, but that might mean Alaska, Australia or Illinois.
