MURDER IN FERRY COMMAND

ON THE SPOT

CHAPTER VI

DAWSON walked slowly to the fireplace and picked the photograph off the ledge for closer examination. Yes, those features were unmistakable.

The presence of the photo here placed the dead soldier squarely into the mystery, adding a further complication. Just where did he fit in with the girl Carole Fiske? His name—Dawson had to think twice before recalling it—was Private Bernard

"What do you want?"

"What do you want?"
Dawson whipped around — he hadn't heard anyone coming along the hall. Framed in the archway leading into the room was a tall, heavy man with bushy eyebrows and harsh features. His resemblance to the unfriendly house-keeper who had let him in was almost startling. His right hand was buried deep in a sport jacket pocket. pocket.

"I came to see Miss Fiske."

"I came to see Miss Fisse."
"I know—you said a message from Lemoy," rasped the other. "Spill it, smart guy!"
Dawson's smile faded.
"Go plumb to hell!" he said.
The man took a step toward the investigator, lifting his hand in his right coat pocket suggestively. But he halted as a girl season.

in his right coat pocket suggestively. But he halted as a girl entered the room.

One glance told Dawson she was Carole Fiske—the girl of the executed Lemoy's snapshot.

"What's going on here, John?" her voice cut in sharply.

"This guy says he has a message for you from Lemoy—I told him he better speak up or else..."

"Shut up, John, you're acting like a fool," she said. Then turning to Dawson. "Who are you?"

"You wouldn't know me by name—I just happened to meet Lemoy a few days ago in Halifax. When I mentioned that I had to visit Chicago on business for my company he asked me to give you a buzz and ... must I tell him, too?" he pointed to the glowering John.

"Doo"t mind him, so on with

John. "Don't mind him, go on with "Don't mind him, go on with the messare!"

"Well-1-1, it wasn't much but I thought it might be nicer to drop around and see you in person. He Dawson grinned, "that he warned

me you are NOT Hedy Lamarr."

"Was there putling else? Did

"Was there nothing else? Did he say where he was going?"

"No," shrugged Dawon. "He apparently wasn't sure where he would be going. He gave me the impression it would be a long trip. A swell fellow, Lemoy, I liked him very . . ."

"You're a liar!" snarled the man called John.

SOMETHING snapped in Dawson. His role of good-natured salesman vanished in a surge of hatred. With one quick step he came within range and his right fist lashed out with sledge-hammer force. John crashed over backwards, one of the old-fashtoned chairs breaking under his fored chairs breaking under his weight. As he hit the floor, Daw-son dived—one hand clutching the downed man's throat while a knee pinned the pocketed hand on the

"When I lift my knee," he growled into John's ear, "pull out that hand—empty—or I'll flatten that nose on your ugly face," His knee lifted a few inches and John's hand slid slowly out of the

With a quick flip, Dawson rolled into his jacket and came out with a black automatic. Straightening up, he gave his clothes a quick brushing and walked to the girl.

brushing and walked to the girl.

"When I go," he said, handing her the gun, "give this back to your boy friend—better advise him to stop playing with this thing." His tone lowered, "I'll be at the Eddington Hotel."

Back in his hotel room, Dawson let the cold water tap run on the bleeding knuckles of his hand.

The girl interested Dawson. Of course, he had had little time to study her and the conversation course, he had had little time to study her and the conversation had been limited. But she was really a beautiful creature. And from what he had been able to judge she didn't seem the hard type. Yet she was sure of herself. Of one thing, however, Dawson was certain—she would get in touch with him somehow, here at the hotel. He couldn't have said enough to do more than arouse her interest about Lemoy yet... what made John so positive that Dawson had been lying?

Could he have heard of Lemoy's death? That was hardly likely. Everything had been closely supervised in Newfoundland. Anyway, he had said he met Dawson in Halifax... ah, that was prob-way, he had said he met Dawson in Halifax . . . ah, that was prob-tbly it—John knew Lemoy had not been in Halifax "a few days ago"! Even so, the girl would ponder over the visit of the friendly sales-

D'AWSON controlled the excitement in his voice as he picked up the receiver. It was the girl. "May I meet you and have a talk tonight?"

"Certainly . . anywhere and anytime."

anytime."
"Thank you." she paused for an instant. "Then let us make it 9:30 at Cottage Grove and 95th street, you see, I'm afraid the Eddington might be watched."

AND DESCRIPTION OF REAL PROPERTY.

"i understand, Miss Fiske," Dawson interrupted, "Nine-thirty
it will be. I'll slip out the rear way just in case anybody follows
me and spots you. Right?"
"Right," she replied.

It was 9:15 when Dawson put on his coat and hat. As an afterthought, he reached into his suitcase and took out a revolver.
Taking the stairs with the red fire lights, he found his way to the ground floor. Unobserved, he came to a double doer with a bolt
and spring lock on the inside.
Sliding back the bolt, he turned
the lock and one of the doors opened onto a paved lane.
Dawson stepped out, turning around to pull the door shut behind him. As he did so, he heard an automobile's gears grind and a motor spring to life. From the corner of one eye he saw a brown mass rushing along the lane and the flash of a gun. Dawson plunged headlong to the narrow sidewalk from the second step,
bullets whistling into the heavy
glass of the double door!

It all happened in a split-second

after the car and leapt onto the rear bumper.

He just had time for one glance through the rear glass before the car lurched with tires screaming around a corner and Dawson tumbled hard to the street.

Blood was streaming down his ace and he knew his knee had seen hurt but he didn't even hear he chatter of the curious crowd gathering around as he rose painfully to his feet. Burning into his mind was what he had seen in that one flashing glimpse through the auto window. two men in the front seat and between them—looking back directly into his eyes—the mysterious Carole Fiske.
