Small Farms

"The (Irish) farms are small, comprising, so I understand, not over 40 acres at the most. There are, however, many small plots, ranging from an acre or two up to six or seven acres in size. These are continual, running up hill and down dale, irregular in size, some of them square, some oblong others wider at one end than at the other, and some even triangular. But each is distinctly outlined and bordered with some of the most beautiful hedges that I have ever seen. When viewing the distant scene, it reminds one of a huge park. . . . Each place, even in the towns and cities, has its garden. Some of them are quite small. I have seen gardens not over six by eight feet in size, that were growing vegetables and flowers both. They utilize every bit of available space here, and the care that they give them is almost unbelievable. . . . Most of the work is done with horses although I have seen some tractors in operation. The horses are big fat fellows, well cared for, and apparently well bred. . . . Ireland has a lot of peat bogs, and that is the principal source of fuel. The peat is cut in brick size pieces, and stacked up in the air to dry. . . ."

Quaint Buildings

"There are still many quaint buildings to be seen. Many of the houses are thatched with straw; they also use a lot of slate stone as shingles on the roofs. Many of the houses are built of stone. . . . I attended church this morning in a beautiful old stone church. It was originally built by one of the old lords of the manor. I wish I could tell you more about it but to do so would entail a description of the place, and we are not permitted to describe places in such a way that certain persons might be thus . . ."

Ireland Is Everything Nice, as Well as Pretty, Capt. Schieferstein Says

"Ireland is everything nice they say about it. I know why they speak of it as being the Emerald Isle," says Capt. Carl J. Schieferstein, with the AEF in Ireland, in a letter to his brother, H. B. Schieferstein, Klamath county weed supervisor.

"Everything is so green and pretty here, and there are different shades of green, each of which is positively gorgeous," the letter continues. "When you look out over the countryside, you are reminded of the scene in an elaborate painting; one that might have been just a bit overdone. However, here the scene is natural, the colors are natural and the beauty of it all is almost beyond description."

Capt. Schieferstein, a native of Rapid City, South Dakota, said that Thomas J. Rose, a Klamath Falls boy, is a member of his unit. Rose's mother is Mrs. Sara J. Rose, 4031 Bisbee street. He is a brother of Mrs. Nellie Shepard, 3751 Bisbee street.

Further excerpts from the captain's letters follow:

"We have been kept pretty busy. Training goes on just the same as it did in the states, and which, of course, is quite necessary. Besides, we would prefer to be kept busy with something like that than to have to spend a lot of time wondering what to do. . . ."

Letters do so much to help a man's morale, and we are always looking forward to receiving them. You should see this bunch of boys I have here when the mail comes in. They just about housed the orderly room until the mail is all passed out. All of them are so anxious to hear from their homes and their friends. You see some pretty disappointed expressions on their faces when they fail to receive at least one letter."

enabled to find out the exact location of our organization. "We are located in one of the most modern camps in northern Ireland. The living quarters are better than tents and very comfortable. We get plenty of good wholesome food to eat, are not working too hard, are well and contented. . . ."

"There are bicycles by the hundreds here and everyone rides one, from grandma and grandpa down to the small youngster of pre-school age. Their bikes are not like ours, but are lighter in weight and not nearly so well constructed. . . ."

"When we go back to the states, I wish that it might be possible to take one of these Irish jaunty carts with me. There are so many of them here, two wheeled affairs, no top, drawn by one horse. . . ."

RENT CONTROL UNDER PRESSURE

WASHINGTON, July 11 (AP)—The rent control sector of the government's stand against inflation, was beset today by strong pressure from organized and individual landlords in many sections of the country.

Threats from Seattle of a nationwide gathering of property owners to force rent ceilings upward reached the office of price administration here simultaneously with news of a threatened "rent strike" by 200,000 CIO unionists in Detroit if rents were raised.

Attempted wholesale evictions were reported from New Haven, Conn., and to top it off, a suit challenging constitutionality of the whole price control act was on file in Mobile, Ala., where a property owner petitioned federal court to block enforcement of the rent freeze in that area.

For the time being, top OPA rent officials were silent on the situation.

But aside from "almost innumerable" instances of OPA lawyers rushing to court to prevent evictions arising from rent-ceiling disputes, an OPA spokesman indicated that the reaction to rent controls, now covering 75 cities, was hardly more bitter than anticipated.
