SPECIALIST HERE TO AID CANNERS

Women who are groping for help as they plan more extensive activities than they have for years, will find Vivian Freeman, canning specialist for the Kerr-Mason Jar company now at Emil's Super market, ready to offer advice on the latest and best procedures along that line.

Miss Freeman states that their slogan, "Waste not—can a lot, but successfully," gives the keynote of their effort to assist housewives to keep the cost of living down, provide their families with more nutritious foods and assist the government by releasing tinned foods for lend-lease and the armed forces.

Actual demonstrations of new ways to prepare foods and fill jars so as to prevent an excess of shrinkage and liquid and to conserve sugar without loss of flavor will be carried on at the store Friday and Saturday. A tempting display of jars of food illustrates new ways of combining fruits and vegetables for most economical use. Some of the more unusual canned foods that may be seen are whole oranges, whole pickled eggs, corn on the cob and blue salad potatoes still in their jackets.

The much sought after booklet, "Food for Victory," may be obtained through Miss Freeman for a very small fee.
