

Sojourners Hold Annual Picnic

Club Is Hostess to Many Guests at Gathering At Moore Park Wednesday

Fifty-five members and guests of the Sojourners club enjoyed a delicious picnic lunch and a day of bridge played in the restful surroundings at Moore park on Wednesday, July the twenty-second.

There were many children of the women present, adding to the spirit of the day and showing great delight in the colorful balloons and other entertainment provided for their enjoyment.

Winners of prizes for the day at bridge were Mrs. Robert Fulton, Mrs. Robert A. Mitchell, Mrs. Matt Rauw, Mrs. Earl Brandberry and Mrs. C. S. Dahlquist.

The group is engaged in doing Red Cross work under leadership of Mrs. Charles Packard, chairman of that committee, and everyone interested is invited to join them in that activity on alternate Wednesday afternoons.

Planned for Wednesday, August the twenty-sixth, is their traditional steak fry at Moore park to which husbands of the members and their guests are invited.

Guests present at last Wednesday's picnic were Mrs. Carl S. Dahlquist, Mrs. Robert A. Mitchell, Mrs. Robert Fulton, Mrs. Jack Cashin, Mrs. D. W. Lovin, Mrs. J. B. Cashin, Miss Edith Knudsen, Miss Mary Ellen Long, Mrs. Ad Dalmer, Mrs. Jerry Horn, Mrs. Don McLeod, Mrs. Virginia Rexford, Mrs. Lucille Klanderick, Mrs. Lacombe, Mrs. C. Preston, Mrs. Paul W. Foster, Mrs. B. L. Hardenbrook, Mrs. R. D. Rakestraw, Mrs. John E. Gates, Mrs. Norma Jensen, Mrs. Helen Raynor, Mrs. Joe Bramhall, Mrs. Maurice Parrish, Mrs. Frederick S. Smith.

The Sojourners club was organized in Klamath Falls in 1937 through the efforts of Mrs. Sid Elliot who brought the idea from Billings, Mont., where the organization originated.

On the afternoon of December the thirty-first of that year, eleven women gathered at the Elliot home on Washington street to learn about the functioning of the club at Billings. The purpose of the organization was solely for the purpose of acquainting strangers in the city with people who would be congenial to them.

Everyone at the meeting expressed an eagerness to establish such a group here and Mrs. Elliot was elected the first president, Mrs. T. H. Reeves, vice president, and Mrs. H. Tenney, secretary-treasurer.

Contract bridge was chosen as the chief entertainment and it was suggested that the members progress in order to make it possible for more to get acquainted with each other. Each person in that group volunteered to call upon some stranger in the town whom they knew to be lonely and bring them to the next meeting, which found twenty-seven women on hand eager to join.

The Willard hotel very graciously gave the club the use of the Blue room and of card tables. Each member donated one or more packs of cards, pencils and some pads. Being thus fully equipped, the organization was off to a good start and has shown steady growth in the succeeding years.

Silver Tea Is Enjoyed

Clever Program Enjoyed by Group At Tulelake

TULELAKE—Pastel shaded sweet peas graced the attractive lace-covered table at the missionary silver tea in the annex of the Tulelake Community Presbyterian church Wednesday afternoon with figurines of white madonnas grouped about the central arrangement.

Mrs. Merton J. Brown, president, presided at the meeting with Mrs. H. T. Street, program chairman, Mrs. Edgar Osborne directed the clever one-act missionary play, drawing her characters from the audience and presenting them with manuscripts to read which had never been before. Responding were Mrs. Albert E. Ryckman, who played a widow, Mrs. Carl Coulson who played the male lead as a scheming real estate promoter, Mrs. Street as the lawyer and Mrs. J. C. Stevenson Jr. who took the part of an ambitious young business girl. Community singing opened the program. Doris Schindler offered two violin numbers accompanied by Mrs. Gilliland and Bernice Hartley and Phyllis Sutton accompanied by Harriett Coulson played two instrumental numbers.

New Members Initiated

Commandos Hear Stiring Talk by Sergeant Cook

The Klamath Commandos received three new members into their group at their meeting at the Elks lodge on Wednesday evening, July the twenty-second. Those initiated were Miss Pat Butler, Miss Ruth Dunning and Miss Kay Schlotthouer. Mrs. Lois Seruys was unanimously elected Commando mother.

Feature of the meeting was a talk by Sergeant Carl Cook in which he emphasized that everyone, big and little, has a vital part to play in the war effort. Everyone must use his own initiative, he said, and above all must invest every available bit of money in war bonds and stamps. People haven't even begun to scratch the surface in giving to the government and must continue to save rubber, scrap metal and other vital materials, even though the "drives" for them are over.

Sergeant Cook placed the blame for the present world conflict squarely on the shoulders of the older generation for not finishing what they started in World War I, but pointed out that it is up to young America to settle things now, once and for all.

Above all, he emphasized, everyone must be on his guard against unwittingly spreading rumors through idle gossip. "Silence saves lives," he said, and the enemy wants us to talk, for it not only gives frequent aid to their cause directly but also demoralizes the faith of those who do the talking or listen to such rumors.

He closed his talk by saying, "Think, Act, Help, and victory will be ours. We, as God-fearing, free people must and will win this war."

Women Turn to Wartime Work

Klamath Unit of Oregon Women's Ambulance Corps Has Vital Place in Community

Trim tan uniforms and classes in the evening are taking the place of fancy frocks and parties for many local women. The military appearing uniforms and overseas caps that you may have seen lately belong to Klamath's platoon four of the Oregon Women's Ambulance Corps, a statewide, incorporated organization embracing a membership of more than six hundred women.

Several of the coast units are already performing actively for the army in various capacities. Members in the Willamette valley are assisting growers in the absence of adequate farm labor, for instance, and every member is being trained to serve her own locality in practically every emergency capacity.

The Klamath group, youngest in the state, is five months old with a roll call of fifty. Its organization and routine follow closely the army set-up, with regimental headquarters in Prineville. Officers rank and insignia are the same as the army with chevrons of maroon and white.

Local commanding officer is Kathleen Livingston, assisted by First Sergeant Naoma Kurtz, Staff Sergeant Mayme Johnson, Squad Sergeants Doris Payne, Berdena Reeder, Gladys Lofdahl, Aili Bissonette, Corporals Jane Epley, Eva Hooper, Ethel Storm, Esther Lawler, Privates First Class Alyce Dickenson, Dena Backes, Vera Chase, and Mona Dixon. Military advisor is Herman Lofdahl, ex-sergeant in the U. S. signal corps.

The group as a whole functions under the emergency medical unit of the civilian defense council, and has furnished both first aid teams and ambulance crews for practice alerts.

Besides boundless enthusiasm and a knack for hard work, requirements for membership in the corps are strict in order to assure thoroughness and competence above average. Mandatory courses are standard and advanced first aid, motor mechanics, fire fighting, switch board operating and Morse code, operators' and chauffeurs' licenses, and civilian defense courses.

Any woman over eighteen may enlist, and courses need not be completed before a recruit is accepted. Two hours of military drill are required each week.

Women who work in offices and factories and housewives and school teachers, as well as those who own their own businesses are represented, and ages vary from twenty to fifty.
