Theta Rho Girls Purchase Bonds

The chapter 8 of the Theta Rho girls were added to the numerous organizations that have delved into their treasures to purchase war bonds. The girls called at the First National bank on Tuesday morning and purchased two $25 bonds.

Funds for the treasury were obtained a short time ago by a card party, and to this sum the girls donated enough to make up for the difference for the bonds.

PURSE-SNATCHING REPORTED HERE

Two cases of purse-snatching, said by officers to be the first in about a year, have been reported to city police in the last few days.

A large, black patent leather purse containing over $265 worth of valuables was snatched from Mrs. Ella Colvig Monday at Ninth and Pine streets by a thief who darted through a service station and disappeared over a fence before he could be apprehended.

Mrs. Colvig, who lives at 1018 Washington street, reported that the purse contained a diamond ring, a wrist watch, a white agate necklace with a gold chain, reading glasses, a $10 bill in a billfold and a coin purse with an undetermined amount of change.

Hugh R. Haddock, 821 Oak street, witnessed the theft and described the snatcher as being a young man of medium height and build, wearing light tan clothing.

J. A. "Tex" Singer of Algoma, on finding his bill fold missing Saturday, reported that he had cashed a check for $190 at the Klamath Billiards, loaned a man $50 and put the balance in his billfold which he placed in his left shirt pocket with the end exposed. Shortly afterward a man bumped him for 10 cents, Singer recalled, and jostled him as he left, saying he didn't need it after all.

Seattle Stores Open 'Til 9 P. M.

SEATTLE, July 28 (AP)—An evening out for many Seattle couples last night meant an evening shopping, with downtown stores open until 9 p. m. as a war measure. They opened at 11:45 a. m.

Stores, restaurants and theatres bustled with activity. The downtown district looked something like a mid-western town on a Saturday night. The night opening of stores, which will be effective each Monday, was planned to redistribute traffic over the overtaxed transportation system and accommodate defense workers.

Commander Jewell Awarded Navy Cross For Heroism

BREMERTON, Wash., July 28 (AP)—Commander Jesse D. Jewell, a naval surgeon, was awarded the navy cross in ceremonies here yesterday for extraordinary heroism displayed at the battle of Pearl Harbor.

Comdr. Jewell, from Portland, was badly burned in an explosion and fire below decks of his ship but continued to minister to wounded and dying men about him, a citation read by Rear Admiral S. A. Taffinder said.

The doctor said he could recall only parts of the day's events and must have suffered from shock himself because he lost cognizance of the passing of time, as he worked on hundreds of young sailors aboard the boat and later ashore.

Cigaret Sales Tax Endorsed

PORTLAND, July 28 (AP)—The cigarette sales tax, placed on the November ballot by referendum action, was endorsed last night by the Multnomah county central democratic party committee.

The tax, 2 cents a package, was passed by the last legislature, and was collected for a few weeks early in the year. A referendum petition halted its enforcement.

Night Club Star Dies From Injuries

SAN FRANCISCO, July 28 (AP)—Judy Carter, 24-year-old night club entertainer, died today of injuries suffered last Friday night in a fall from a fourth story hotel window.

Jay Brower, band leader and master of ceremonies at the same night club, identified her as his bride of four weeks.

There Were Hack Saws in Those Shoes

LOS ANGELES, July 28 (AP)—Mrs. Hattie Stern visited the county jail to take her brother-in-law a pair of new shoes.

But she remained as a resident because, Chief Jailer William J. Bright said today, a pair of hack-saw blades were found concealed between the soles.

Washington, D. C. Will Keep Its Ear Cocked This Time

WASHINGTON, July 28 (AP)—A chastened capital went to work today with its burning ears cocked toward the air-raid sirens and its red face grim with determination to erase the blackout blot of a week ago last night.

Sometime between dawn this morning and dusk Friday evening, the air-raid warning will shriek a practice alarm during the daylight hours—and if traffic fails to freeze in its tracks and folks forget to scoot to shelter, somebody's going to suffer.

You can take the word of Director James M. Landis of the office of civilian defense for that.

Landis was up in the air—literally and figuratively—when the last blackout began, when, as he said, "Union station stayed all night long like Union station" . . . when enough lights blinked merrily up out of the night for "an enemy pilot to have mapped the city!"

Rumor has it that the OGD chief was some time coming back down to earth, although the plane which carried him on an inspection tour landed promptly.

But when he did, what he did next was no rumor, brother. He braced his feet, took a deep breath and the memory of that tongue-lashing lingers with the air raid wardens yet. It started out with something about "A fine example for the rest of the nation," and concluded with "Next time it will be different—or else."

This is a Suit. It is Ruined

It was hung away in a closet, no care was taken of it and the moths got into it. Its owner is due for an unpleasant surprise the next time he wants to wear the suit.

This is a Balance Sheet. It is Ruined

It once was the balance sheet of a going retail concern. Its owner let the "moths" get into it.

Priorities, rationing, the misfortunes of war cut down his supplies of goods. He stopped advertising, let his customers forget him, neglected to give them services and substitutes for goods he used to sell.

This is the Difference

Newspaper advertising in wartime can be the difference between the success or failure of a retail establishment. New goods, new services made valuable to the public and sold to the public by consistent advertising keeps the "moths" out of the ledger of a going concern.
