Front line dispatches said the Germans were showering para chute troops behind the Russian lines near Kotelnikovski, 95 miles below Stalingrad, but said the aerial invaders were being promptly mopped up.

Military advices pictured the whole region from Kletskaya, 75 miles northwest to Stalingrad, to the south as a land of flames, with the cherry orchards and steppe homes of the Cossacks smashed and burning and the skies darkened by mass flights of nazi planes.

Stalingrad Crisis

In the battle of the Don river bend, before Stalingrad, the nazi command asserted that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's defenders were "driven together in a narrow space where they faced annihilation."

To the north, in the Rzhev sector 130 miles west of Moscow, the Germans acknowledged that they were fighting a "heavy de-fensive battle," with the red armles, newly reinforced, pressing a strong attack.

At mid-day, after bitter all-night fighting, red army head-quarters conceded that the nazis had broken a new gap in the Russian defenses at Armavir, 180 miles below Rostov. Meanwhile, U. S. Ambassador Admiral William H. Standley said in Moscow that the Rus-sians had three lines of defense —the present one the Volga and -the present one, the Volga and the Urals-"and the Germans have not yet reached the Volga."

Ambassador Standley said he had found "not the slightest indication that the Russians have any idea of quitting."

In the battle of egypt, Italian field headquarters reported increased air and ground activity.

Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck's imperial British armies held Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's invaders at bay on the El Alamein front, 75 miles west of Alexandria.
