CHAPTER VIII

ENID couldn't decide whether she was glad or sorry about what she had learned, as she undressed for bed. If Dr. Holliday was a divorced man, he was a free man. And yet-the feeling was so hazy that she had diffiwas so hazy that she had diffi-culty analyzing it—a divorce somehow tarnished him in her mind. It was like seeing, unex-pectedly, clay feet on a marble statue.

It was Wednesday evening about 9 when her doorbell rang. When she answered it, there stood the doctor. He grinned at her amiably.

the doctor. He grinned at her amiably.

"It's too beastly hot to stay indoors tonight. I saw your light—I thought, maybe, you'd like to take a ride."

Enid looked down at her paint-ameared smock. She'd been working all day, she hadn't even been cut for a breath of air. "I'd be glad to," she said shyly, "if you don't mind waiting until I dress."

"Of course not," he told her. "Just ring my bell when you're ready."

"Just ring my bell when you're ready."

She fairly flew into her clothes. A black wool sport dress cut on expensively simple lines—she ahivered when she thought how much she had paid for it, the jacket of her white linen suit, the white sandals and a pair of hose so sheer you couldn't believe they were there. She swept her hair up swiftly into its simple arrangement. Then a touch of deep rose lipstick matching her nail polish, and perfume on brows and in the hollow of her throat—an evasive fragrance as delicate as the scent of wild flowers.

fragrance as delicate as the scent of wild flowers.

Her reward was the look Dr. Holliday gave her when he joined her in the hall, a look of admiration and acceptance.

"He really thinks I belong to his class." Enid thought as she settled beside him in the seat of the convertible. "I wonder how he'd act if he knew I was a $20-a-week stenographer off on a binge?" But she couldn't feel sorry for the deception at the moment.

DR HOLLIDAY took the river road. He had the top down on the car and above them the stars shone big and luminous, and were reflected in the still dark reaches of the river. As they drew near the Club Del Rio they could hear the dance music. Enid remembered the last night she had been there with Tom, the night they had run into Grace Dingline and Norma Senton from the office. Dr. Holliday motioned for service to a pert waitress who had just brought a tray to the next car. "What will you have?" he asked Enid.

She smiled. "You must be a

She smiled. "You must be a mind reader. I just remembered that I hadn't had any super."

"Why didn't you tell me? We'll go inside and order a steak."
"No. A sandwich is all I want. It's rather silly, isn't it, to forget meals."

He gave their order to the waiting sirl and turned back to her

He gave their order to the waiting girl and turned back to her.

"If. I'm not being impertinent—what made you forget?"

"Oh, I was busy painting."

"That's right. You told me you were a fashion artist. By the way, have you landed a job yet?"

Enid shook her head. "No—I'm not having much luck."

He considered for a moment.
"I might be able to help you. Sam Thornton, head of the adver-

Sam Thornton, head of the adver-tising department at Lilley's, is a good friend of mine. Would you like a letter to him?"
"Would I?" Enid echoed fer-would I?" Enid echoed fervently, "I'll write one when we get back," he promised. The band glided into a hot rendition of "Blues in the Night." The doctor hummed it lightly under his breath. Impulsively he turned to her, "Let's dance, this one."

"Oh—I don't dance well."
"All the more reason to dance with me," he said cheerly, "I'm not a professional either."
He was not to be put off with casual excuses, Enid saw. Rather helplessly she let him help her out of the car and lead her around to the front entrance of the dance pavillon. He bought a strip of dance tickets, and they went down the shallow steps to the dance floor.

the snallow steps to the dance floor.

Dr. Holliday, as he had freely admitted, wasn't a good dancer. He seemed to know only one step and it kept them turning around and around, but there was no place to go on the crowded dance floor anyway. Enid gradually grew less tense. There wasn't much chance of anyone she knew spotting her in such a crowd, either. It was their second time around the floor that she saw Tom and the floor that she saw Tom and Phil. They were scated at a table on the terrace, drinking beer and watching the dancers, She stopped abruptly and her stomach went cold. Dr. Holliday looked down at her.

"What's the matter?"

She pulled at his arm. "I feel faint. Let's get out-of here." She didn't know how white her face "Of course not." This time she didn't have to feign indignation.

"I'm sorry." he apologized.

"About that letter to Sam Thornton. I'll write it tonight and leave it in your mail box when I go out in the morning. You can get it when you get up."

"Thanks a lot. Dr. Holliday. It's kind of you to bother."

"No bother," he insisted, grinning, and then teasingly, "Not Doctor Holliday, please. It's "Hank' to my friends."

She tried to say, "Thank you, then, Hank," lightly, but her tongue stumbled and suddenly her
