Europe's Changing Face; In 36 Months the Axis Shadow Blacks Out a Continent

This was Europe when the German invasion of Poland started World War II. Britain and France joined the fight September 3, but the other nations of Europe remained neutral.

In the war's first year, Germany split Poland with Russia, the Soviet—on the axis side—seized areas from Finland, the Nazis conquered most of northern Europe, and Italy joined the conflict.

In the war's second year, Russia came in on the Allied side after invasion by Germany. Nazis overrun Balkans, but the Allies moved first to occupy Near East nations and set up a big base in Egypt.

By end of war's third year, the black axis shadow covers most of Europe and European Russia, but American and British land and air forces in England may soon begin to erase it in the west.
