A Great U. S. Victory

(Medford Mail-Tribune)

WE always believe in giving the devil his due. Not that we wish to call the naval news censorship names, but we have complained frequently of the system in control there, and no doubt will again.

But there is this to be said for naval news, as well as for United States war news in general.

While, in our opinion, good news is stressed too much and bad news not enough, the American system does stand head and shoulders above all others with the possible exception of Great Britain, and that superiority rests in our FIRM REFUSAL TO ALTER THE FACTS OR RESORT TO FICTION.

Seldom do the reports of a major United States naval engagement tell ALL the truth, but unlike the Axis reports, they NEVER tell lies—they never manufacture falsehoods out of whole cloth, as Tokyo does repeatedly.

Therefore when the naval news bureau in Washington reports, as it did yesterday, that four more Japanese ships have been sunk by United States submarines, and four others damaged in "Far Eastern Waters," there is no doubt whatever that is what happened.

Just as there can be no doubt of the report the day before of the United States air victory at Kiska harbor, with six Jap airplanes destroyed, eight enemy ships blasted and 500 Japanese killed or wounded, without a single American loss.

That was an OUTSTANDING United States naval triumph, and there can be no doubt whatever of its truth.

Which is all to the credit of naval intelligence, and should be a source of genuine satisfaction to the people of the country.

We only wish the policy could be amplified and strengthened by not only telling the truth but at ALL times telling the people ALL the truth, and telling it at the time—not three or four months later. Excepting, of course, and ONLY excepting those facts that WOULD give information of value to the enemy.

Antelope Season Slated For Opening on Sept. 23

Oregon's fifth successive open season for antelope opens September 23, and will extend to and including September 30, the state commission said today. Bag limit is one antelope of either sex, and hunting will be permitted in specified portions of Lake, Malheur and Harney counties.

The number of antelope tags to be issued is limited to 1500 and while there still are some available, it is anticipated that most of them, if not all, will be sold by the opening of the season. Anyone desiring to apply for a tag should mail to the Game Commission office in Portland the fee of $3.50 if a resident, or $5.00 if a non-resident, together with information as to the number and kind of hunting license owned.

No checking stations will be maintained this year due to lack of sufficient personnel, but instead each individual purchasing an antelope tag must, upon completion of his final hunt, fill out the special check-out form attached to his antelope tag and mail it to the Game Commission office from the nearest post office or post box in the hunting area.

Regulations prohibit the use of any gun less than 1700 foot-pound muzzle energy, factory rating. It is also unlawful to shoot antelope from highways, automobiles or horseback.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 — A voters' alarm is being sounded by the administration, as a result of ballot boredom evident during the primaries. WPB's Donald Nelson has issued a statement advising workers, in a non-partisan tone, to take time from their work to go to the polls, as democracy is what we are fighting for.

The word has been taken up by the official A. F. of L. penman, Philip Pearl, who writes that "all signs indicate a dangerously lackadaisical attitude on the part of the average citizen toward the coming election."

Radio broadcasters are spreading it further.

The left-wing journals are going even beyond, and warning the administration it may lose the house if it does not "do something."

Thus, Mr. Nelson's pure non-political note is being melodiously confused into a jangle-jangle-jangle of partisan campaigning.

The truth is the administration expected the new war workers in industry to contribute heavy new support for the administration candidates in the primaries. But, everywhere in the industrial regions in Maine, in the supposedly hot Michigan republican contest, and throughout the farm belt, new low voting records were established.

NOT EXCITED

The explanation most common in Washington is that people are too busy to vote, that neither worker nor farmer wants to read, think or talk politics after the heavy days of work they are putting in now.

Probably nearer the truth is the fact that no great political issue is flaming in the country today, and that people have not been excited by the alternatives presented to them at the polls thus far. To be added to these reasons are:

The complete failure of the attempt to make pre-Pearl Harbor voting records of congressmen a subject of political debate and, not in the least last, gas rationing and tire conservation.

Lack of interest generally favors the man in office. He has the organization and machine votes which always turn out, rain or shine. But, this time, the administration's confidence in this interpretation has been shaken by the Gallup poll indicating diminishing democratic prospects.

HE WAS EMBARRASSED

Smothered almost entirely in the senate banking committee hearings on the price stabilization bill was Leon Henderson's comment that it was actually a farm price increase bill. Mr. Henderson could have gone further, had he not been under administration wraps, and "embarrassed," as he said, by some of the questions asked by the senators.

He could have said (as all inside officials know) that the congressional leaders stretched in the original Brown bill the farm price formula Mr. Roosevelt offered. The president had said congress should fix the highest farm price on any recent date as the ceiling (He wanted August 15.)

But Senator Bankhead, of Alabama, who was in the conference of the leaders framing the legislation, knew that cotton had been much higher last spring, than on August 15. The senate floor leader, Barkley (from Kentucky) knew that burley tobacco had been higher too.

So these two—with eyes on home products—proposed that the Brown bill fix the ceiling at the highest price since last January 1 on all products (not mentioning cotton or tobacco, of course.)

FARM BLOC INTERPRETATION

The farm bloc nearly got away with one just as broad. Mr. Roosevelt mentioned idly in his message that labor wages should be considered in fixing farm parity price goals.

The farm bloc chose to interpret this casual phrase as meaning the cost of farm labor should be considered and, therefore, old parity price goals should be revised and moved upward. This would have had the effect of boosting parity—and prices—up to 125 per cent.

Mr. Roosevelt had to stop this misinterpretation of what he said, by calling in the leaders and writing an open letter explaining he meant parity should be adjusted to labor wages, as, in fact, is being done now.

The American Farm Bureau head, Edward O'Neal, showed the hidden meanings of this sideline argument. He testified that when the original parity fixing bill was up in congress some years ago, the farm bloc did not want to include farm labor as a factor in computing parity because such labor costs then were low.

Now they are high, so the bloc would like to have them computed.
