

Sunday Riot Depicted in Newsphotos

When violence flared on Klamath streets Sunday in a demonstration against Jehovah's Witnesses, Wesley Guderian, Herald and News photographer, was on the spot with his camera and took the accompanying pictorial story of the incident. Most of the pictures were made at Ninth and Klamath avenue where the religious sect was holding a convention of several hundred delegates.

CARS TIPPED OVER—Large numbers of automobiles of Jehovah's Witness delegates were overturned on streets and parking lots during Sunday's demonstration against the religious sect. The picture was taken from the top of one overturned car, showing two others, at Ninth street and Klamath avenue.

AMBULANCE CORPS ON DUTY—Besides taking fist-fight casualties to hospital, members of the Klamath unit of the Oregon Women's Ambulance corps were called upon to rush a prospective mother from the Jehovah's Witnesses convention hall. Mrs. John Riskus of Gary street is here being placed in the ambulance, turned over to the ambulance corps some time ago by the Salvation Army. Ambulance corps members visible in the picture are, from left to right, Private Inez McCoy, Corporal Ethel Storm and Lieutenant Kathleen Livingston.

URGED DISPERSAL — Carl Cook, former police judge and now a marine recruiting sergeant, is shown atop a sound truck from which he urged the crowd to disperse. His appeal had good effect.

BONFIRE IN STREET—This picture shows the bonfire composed of literature and banners seized from the convention hall.

THIS STARTED SOMETHING—Trouble started in the back alley, behind the convention hall, when a citizen undertook to cut a telephone cable carrying a speech into the convention hall from a Witness leader in Ohio. Witness fighters sprang from the back door and a bloody battle ensued in which several on both sides were hurt, none seriously.

BACK ON ITS WHEELS—Jehovah's Witnesses had a strong-back crew to put overturned cars back on their wheels. The crew is shown righting a jalopie on Klamath avenue.

BOND SALES BOOM—A total of $1032 in bonds and stamps was sold at this booth set up opposite the Jehovah Witness convention hall. The purchases were made by townspeople—not Witnesses—in a wave of patriotic fervor.

ANOTHER BONFIRE—Another bonfire was set at East Main and Holly streets, where literature and other articles from the local Witness headquarters was burned in the street.

WITNESSES LEAVING HALL—Picture shows Jehovah's Witnesses trooping from the convention hall after order had been restored.

TOWNSMEN'S BATTLE LINE—Picture shows local men attempting to open a door at the back of the convention hall, after fighting had occurred in the alley. Just after the picture was taken the door opened far enough for a Witness to reach out and "conk" the man at right foreground on the head.
