CASCADE SUMMIT — Cascade Summit and vicinity has been visited frequently by bears this fall. In fact, each fall an invasion of bears is experienced. However, now a bear that has the natives worried is visiting this part of the country.

Friday he attacked a horse belonging to John Melton, packer here, injuring it so severely that it was necessary to shoot the horse. The wounds in the horse's side were so deep that the entrails were visible.

It is presumed that it was the same bear that visited the Addison Brewer home and demolished the cover of their garbage pit.

BRACKEN RE-OPENS CRESCENT STORE

CRESCENT LAKE—Thomas Bracken, who for nearly 30 years has had a store in Crescent, expects to return to the Bend hospital for treatment soon, but only for a few days. However, Bracken, who spent a year in the hospital recently, is much improved in health and has reopened his store for business in Crescent.

He has been in business there longer than any other merchant and is known to most people of that section. Cresent, at the time he first went there was only a very small hamlet waiting for a railroad to come by.

It was missed by the Southern Pacific line by some 17 miles. The Great Northern went five miles east of it, and it first heard trains whistle in its streets when Frank Gilchrist built his standard gauge road to the mill town he has put in one mile north of the old, worn town of Crescent.

NO PICTURE OF FDR IN 'VOTER'

SALEM, Sept. 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt's picture cannot be published in Oregon's Voter's pamphlet this year, a state law providing that only pictures of candidates may be published, Secretary of State Earl Snell said Monday.

W. L. Josslin, secretary of the democratic state central committee, submitted the president's picture for publication in the pamphlet, which will be mailed by the state department to all voters a few days before the November 3 general election.

Snell said, however, that the pamphlet will include a lengthy statement filed by Josslin which outlines the party principles in support of democratic candidates.

The president's picture, Snell said, may be published when the president himself is a candidate.

Snell said he made the ruling after consultation with the attorney general.

Restrictions on automotive equipment make it necessary for some school children—who otherwise would use busses — to walk to school this year. The state traffic safety division suggests motorists keep this in mind while driving in the vicinity of schools to avoid accidents involving these children.

MINING ACTIVITY ORDERED CHANGED

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 23 (AP)—Federal Judge James A. Fee has ordered L. G. Dawson to transfer his mining activities from Southern Pacific holdings at Crescent Lake to some other place.

Dawson recently filed a claim on 20 acres covering right-of-way, depot, water tank, engine house, Y-tracks and other property of the railroad at Crescent Lake.

Dawson dug holes on the depot grounds after ordering the railroad to remove its facilities from his claim, the railroad's attorney, Frank C. McColloch, said.

Judge Fee granted the railroad a preliminary injunction which ordered Dawson to remain off the property except as a customer of the line. Dawson failed to appear in court to contest the preliminary injunction.

Judge Fee also ordered the railroad to post $500 bond pending the hearing of the case on its merits. No date was set.

SLICKERED

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—A man phoned Mrs. Louis L. Retallack at the hospital (she's just given birth to a daughter) that he had been hired by Mr. Retallack to wax the floors. She told the maid to let him in.

Her first impression, upon returning home, was that the floors hadn't received much of a going over. But the house had. About $500 worth of silver, furs, watches and jewelry were missing.

Mr. Retallack said he hadn't hired any man to wax the floors.
