WAAGS ARRIVE IN KLAMATH ON RECRUIT JOB

Coincident with the return from Portland of six more young women who have been sworn in by the women's army auxiliary corps, after having en-listed through the local recruiting office, is the arrival in the city of two WAAC lieutenants on a recruiting mission.

They are Lt. Emily Hathaway and Lt. Margaret Horn, who, also by coincidence, were the officers who interviewed local applicants when they un-derwent their examinations in

Urgent Need Reported They are both recent grad-uates of the officer candidates school for WAACs at Fort Des Moines, Is., and spoke at a joint meeting of the Oregon Wom-en's Ambulance corps and the Klamath Fall's Commandos Tuesday night, when they were nbarded with questions evidenced a lively local interest in their program. Accompanying them in a public relations capacity was Claire Churchill, former Lt.Col. of OWAC.

They reported an urgent need the enrollment of cooks and aircraft warning workers as well as for basic trainees who will enter unassigned. Lt. Horn plained that applicants for enrollment must have excellent character, attested by references from responsible citizens. Doc-umentary evidence f birth and tizenship are required, as well the passing of physical and ental aptitude tests.

Non-Combatant Service Evidence of vocational skill ould be provided if the aplcant wants assignment to a ecial field. In addition to se pay, medical and dental re, hospitalization, food, cloth-

WAAC's and Regular Army Join Forces Here

Lt. Emily Hathaway, left, and Lt. Margaret Horn, newly commissioned officers in the WAAC accompanied Lt.-Col. B. H. Hensley, center, and other army officers here on a recruiting mission, arriving Tuesday. Lt.-Col. Hensley is commanding officer of the Oregon recruiting and induction district to which the two lieutenants have been assigned for duty. Even non-commissioned officers in the regular army come to attention and salute smartly when they make an appearance.

Here this week in the interest of acquainting Klamath county men with opportunities in force for those having specialized skills are, left to Captain Gerald M. Sullivan, west coast air force specialist f.om the training center at Santa Ana, Calif., and Lt. Walter L. Ritchey, special liaison officer from Fort Douglas, Utah. They are to spend Wednesday in Lakeview and return to Klamath Falls Thursday.

If the present officers' uniforms are an indication of the quality of clothing, it is obvious that the WAACs will be smart-ly turned out. Service is non-combatant, with every WAAC expected to relieve a soldier for combat duty, but service may be either foreign or domestic, according to Lt. Hathaway. She advised any woman interested to contact Sgt. Frank Huhin, in charge of the local urmy recruiting station in the Federal sors.

Needed Now There is an urgent need for mechanics of all kinds, Capt. Sullivan said, and accordingly special quotas, open for a limited time, have been set up to enlist mechanics, armorers, aircraft mechanics, gas and diesel engine experts, radio and telephone men, and instrument repairmen or appliance maintenance men.

These men are needed to service the rapidly increasing number of planes coming off the assembly lines, said Capt. Sullivan. Men will be enlisted through the regular channels administered by the recruiting service, and if possible their basic training will be given at the air fields where the ministered by the recruiting in May.

Tray dryers that can be used air fields where they will be permanently assigned. Qualified men only are enlisted under the current directive and these men must not only pass the physical and aptitude tests, but must also satisfy the local employment service of their vocational qualifications. This group is the only one at present secured through such cooperation.

Details Available Once enlisted as a private, those accepted may anticipate immediate assignment at jobs proportionate to the highest lev el of their indicated ability, said Capt, Sullivan, and they may also anticipate attractive ratings that may boost pay as high as $138 per month. This is over and above the usual allowances such as food, clothing, lodging medical and dental care.
