

HUNT SEASON DISCUSSED BY LEW WALLACE

Lew Wallace, democratic nominee for governor, who paid Klamath Falls a campaign visit Monday night.

Lew Wallace, democratic nominee for governor, said in a talk here Monday night that he is "satisfied" the state game commission, if it wishes, can open the hunting season at such time as the fire hazard abates, under a 1941 law which Wallace himself sponsored in the state senate.

Wallace said this law closed all seasons and left it up to the game commission to establish seasons as it sees fit. This measure was SB147, 1941 session. Wallace said the season could be extended beyond the original dates.

"I want to make it clear," said Wallace, "that as governor, senator or private citizen, I shall insist that all moneys collected for special seasons, like antelope, doe deer and elk, must be returned in event there is no open season."

Wallace emphasized in his talk here that he favors a three-man state tax commission, as contrasted with a one-man commission proposed by his opponent, Republican Nominee Earl Snell.

This question is a matter of great importance, he said, and the public should know the contrasting positions of the two candidates upon it.

Wallace, speaking at a dinner held in the Willard hotel annex, paid his respects to State Senator Marshall Cornett, who was an invited guest at the dinner. The democratic nominee pointed out that he "stayed with" Cornett on the latter's fight in the senate for a reapportionment bill that would have given Klamath county a senator, exclusively.

Walter Whitbeck, democratic candidate for United States senator, spoke at the meeting, directing a verbal assault upon the record of Senator Charles L. McNary, his opponent in the November election.

Whitbeck asserted that the peace, after World War I, was lost in the United States senate, and said that Senators Lodge, Borah, Poindexter and Johnson led this movement, with McNary joining Lodge at the close in "scuttling the peace."

Whitbeck says he favors amending the social security act to take in all persons who wish to come under it.

Senator Wallace was accompanied on the trip here by Mrs. Wallace, and they brought along their bird dog, Pepper. The campaigner left for Lakeview Tuesday.

On Tuesday afternoon, Wallace visited various potato fields in the basin, including those on the farms of G. J. Hilyard, Burrell Short, Henry Semon and Charles DeLap. He had lunch with the Merrill Service club.

JEHOVAHITE'S APPEAL GOING TO HIGH COURT

SALEM, Oct. 6 (P)—The Oregon supreme court declined today to withhold its decision by which it had refused to accept jurisdiction in the case of Mrs. Ada McSparran, Portland woman convicted of violating a city ordinance by permitting her daughters, aged 9 and 12, to sell magazines on the street.

She had asked the court to stay its mandate so as to permit her to appeal to the United States supreme court, but the Oregon court said she may appeal directly from the Multnomah county circuit court to the nation's highest court.

Mrs. McSparran, a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses, was convicted in Portland municipal court for violating a city ordinance prohibiting children from selling periodicals on the streets. The girls were selling literature of their religious sect, and the mother was fined $21.

She lost her appeal to Multnomah county circuit court, and then appealed to the state supreme court, which refused to accept jurisdiction on the grounds that Oregon laws do not provide for supreme court appeals from convictions for violations of city ordinances.

The supreme court, in its decision of two weeks ago, said that Mrs. McSparran could appeal directly from the circuit court decision to the U. S. supreme court.

Appeals to the U. S. supreme court from state courts must be made from the courts of the last resort, which ordinarily would be from the state supreme court. But in this case, since the state supreme court has no jurisdiction, the circuit court is the court of last resort.

Mrs. McSparran's appeal is based on her contention that the ordinance deprived her of the constitutional rights of free press and free speech.

OUR MEN IN SERVICE

ON FURLOUGH—Fred Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Snyder, of Route 3, Box 545, is currently home on a furlough from an air corps training field in Florida. Another son, James A. Snyder, is somewhere in the Pacific war zone with the army. Ranks of either of the boys were not available.

S. J. "Sonny" Enders and his brother K. Y. Enders, both marines stationed with the U. S. Marine aircraft engineer squadron at San Diego, visited the local marine corps recruiting office Friday. Both boys attended the Henley high school. Sonny is best remembered by his boxing ability here in Klamath Falls, and recently he was assistant chief of police in Sitka, Alaska where he also was in business.

K. Y. Enders enlisted first from Sitka and was sent to San Diego for his training, a short time later Sonny paid his own transportation to San Diego and joined the marines so as to be with his brother.

Ernie, another brother, and a clever lightweight boxer here several years ago, is now living with his parents in Prineville, Oregon where a family reunion was held, and all brothers expect to be in the marines together when Ernie enlists some time in the near future.

GET CRACKS AT 'EM—PFC Russell L. Luce has written to his father, L. E. Luce of 523 South Fourth street, that he has gotten "several cracks at the Japs" while serving with the marines aboard a battleship in the Pacific. Luce had the distinction of being the last marine to enlist through the local office in 1941, while his brother, Lawrence, was the first to enlist in 1942.

Since leaving here he underwent training at San Diego, was stationed for several weeks at Pearl Harbor where he was assigned to the ship he is on at present.

Recent enlistments in the U. S. marine corps, according to the local marine recruiters, are James Orville Cason, Banks, Ore.; James Edward Boulton, Ashland; Warren Garry McGuire, Medford; John Edward Delapp, Hill; Rene Simon Foubert, Harold David Eittrheim, Robert Jack Smith, Robert Ward Purviance, and Lincoln A. Schmidt all from Klamath Falls.

From six to seven weeks face the above men at San Diego, where each man is judged by his own qualifications and ability to secure promotions. After the initial training the recruit is given a more thorough training in his assigned or chosen military career.

Corporal Merle M. Rhoads who enlisted in the United States marine corps December 20, 1941 was a visitor on a seven day furlough from San Diego, where he is undergoing intensive training. Rhoads expects to be transferred to the parachute battalion in the near future. Corporal Rhoads is one of the original members of Battery A. of the local national guards who left here two years ago. He has been visiting his family here while on leave.

Rhoads stated that he was more than satisfied with the marines, and added that the sky was the limit for opportunities for one who was willing to obey orders and work.

IN PACIFIC—John Charles Sieman second class, is the son of Mrs. Elsie Siemens and John Siemens. He enlisted in the navy a few days after Pearl Harbor.

"Jack" is a graduate of Klamath Union high school, attended Oregon State college, and was employed by the forest service. He is now somewhere in the Pacific.

Word has been received here telling of the promotion of E. Lyle Kidd to the rank of technical sergeant. Sergeant Kidd graduated from the radio technical school at West Palm Beach, Fla., went to March field, Calif., from there, and is now serving in the Aleutians. His sister, Mrs. Carlton Ross, lives at Bly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross recently entertained Private Wayne L. Massey, who was home on furlough from his duties as airplane mechanic at March field.

Alfred M. Richardson, formerly of Max's coffee shop, is now a third class petty officer and a cook at the navy training station at San Diego.

"We can feed about 8000 men every hour," he said in a letter to The Herald and News. "That is in 13 mess halls combined. You don't have time to get homesick because you are so busy from daylight to dark. For eats we have beans, and I mean three times a day."

WINS MEDALS—Private Alec Boehm of the U. S. marines is shown decorated with three medals he has received recently as expert rifleman, expert pistol and expert bayonet. He reports that he has been assigned to the motor transport corps at San Diego where he is stationed. Boehm is a former Klamath Falls resident and enlisted through the local recruiting office.

A. R. Triplett, volunteer navy recruiter and yeoman 2/c, states that Charles O'Connor was sworn into the U. S. navy in Portland Saturday, October 3. He enlisted through the local navy recruiting office. O'Connor was formerly employed at the First National bank here in Klamath Falls.

Sergeant Hubert B. Meggs of 2618 Kane street, Klamath Falls, is now serving with the United States army flying school, Pecos, Texas. Sgt. Meggs, a former employe of Weyerhaeuser Timber company, is one of the first enlisted men to serve at PAFS, which promises to be one of the largest basic flying schools in the country.

WINS WINGS—Thomas A. Johnston, route 3, box 231F of Klamath Falls, has received his silver wings and second lieutenant's commission in the air force reserve. Johnston completed the air force advanced flying school training at Williams field, Chandler, Ariz., on September 29. Graduation ceremonies were held on that date.

A shed burned a 2008 Applegate avenue, it was learned. The truck went out at 1:25 p. m. Tuesday, called to extinguish a grass fire at Twelfth and Lincoln streets.

CALIFORNIA'S MARRIED MEN RECEIVE CALL

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 6 (P)—Local draft boards in all 58 counties of California have started to call married men for military training. Col. Kenneth H. Leitch, state director of selective service, said today.

To meet their quotas, boards are turning to married men with no children and single men with collateral dependents as single men's pools are exhausted.

Col. Leitch said that "the majority" of 3-A registrants without children would be called but that he had no idea how long it would be before the process is completed.

MARRIED men with children will not be called, Leitch said, until state headquarters gets the go-ahead from the National Selective Service director.

A limited number of men with no children were inducted prior to amendment of the Selective Service Act. Under the new setup, single men were "pooled" and called first.
