Leaning Tower of Yankee Stadium

George "Whitey" Kurovski, Cardinals' third baseman, leans backward to catch Yankee second baseman Joe Gordon's foul in the 9th inning of the World Series game played at the Yankee Stadium in New York. Marlin "Slats" Marlon, Cards' shortstop, falls behind Kurovski. The Cards shutout the Yanks 2 to 0.

World Series Sidelights

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
 NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—Wrapping up the world series for another year, and possibly longer, it was a long time coming, but the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals finally accomplished what many were up to the Yankees' . . . The new champs were on their way back to St. Louis today, and if they breeze right on through town without slowing down, they should be expected . . . After all, a team that can wipe out a ten-game Brooklyn lead in the National league five-game series, winning 47 of its last 57 starts, just doesn't know when to stop.

The Yankees are old hands at traveling, but they saw so much "country" the past few days they don't care for any "Moore" . . . Enos (Country) Slaughter and Terry Moore, the crack guardsmen of the Cardinals' outer regions, robbed the Yankees of base hits with circus catches in every game and divided ten hits between them . . . The honor of beating the Yankees twice in world series competition now is shared by the Cardinals and the New York Giants . . . The Cards also handed the Bombers their last series defeat in 1926, while the Giants turned them back in the 1921 and 1922 classics.

If you're wondering why Manager Joe McCarthy didn't order Whitey Kurovski passed intentionally in the ninth inning yesterday, with only one out, a man on second and two weak hitters coming up, remember that this same Kurovski fanned the first three times he faced Red Ruffing in the opening game . . . When Kurovski socked his game-winning homer, McCarthy probably was wondering the same thing . . . The bat he used to sew up the series was the only one Kurovski brought from St. Louis, his others having been broken in the regular season . . . He wouldn't let any of his mates use it in batting practice and after the game he refused to let it out of his sight.

Grid Camp

Notes

SEATTLE, Oct. 6 (AP)—Apparently preparing to go over the Oregon line if he can't go through it, Coach Ralph (Pest) Welch is drilling the University of Washington football squad in passing this week.

Told by Scout D. V. (Tubby) Graves that Oregon's line represented a real challenge to a Washington squad unable to break through California's defenses last Saturday, Welch put the Huskies through a stiff drill last night—with the emphasis on passing.

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 6 (AP)—Coach Lon Stiner of Oregon State college today bemoaned the number of injuries on the Beaver football squad.

"It begins to look as if we'll be working out in the training room for the rest of the week," he said.

Most seriously injured are Orville Zielaskowski, guard with a dislocated elbow, and Choc Shelton, fullback, with a game leg. Extent of Shelton's injury was not determined.

Other casualties of the California game are End Warren Perryman, Quarterback Bob Stevens and Halfback B Libbee, although they are expected to recover in time for the game against U. C. L. A. Saturday.

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 6 (AP)—Fullback Tom Oxman may be ready to return to the Oregon lineup in time for the Washington game Saturday, but he will have a hard time getting Bill Davis out of the position.

Oxman, expected to be a regular until he was injured just before the first game of the season, has been engaging in light workouts lately.

Davis, a sophomore, took over the position, and Coach John Warren has praised his play.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6 (AP)—Encouraged by the way his athletes looked in defeat against St. Mary's Navy Preflight, Coach Babe Horrell of the U. C. L. A. Bruins has decreed heavy practice the rest of this week in preparation for Saturday's tussle here with Oregon State.

Fullback Noah Curtis, who has used up all his intercollegiate eligibility, was assigned to tutor the Bruin backfield, a task Horrell has been discharging himself since Bernie Masterson joined the navy.

CALDWELL, Idaho, Oct. 6 (AP)—He has "a tackle situation," but if Coach George Willott solves it you will hear a lot from his backs when the Lettuce Bowl game blows around, the College of Idaho mento promised today.

The Lettuce Bowl is at Nampa and the game is Oct. 16 with University of Idaho Southern Branch — the opener for Willott's Coyotes.

After that, whether he has solved his tackle situation or not Willott will send his team out after the northwest collegiate conference pennant.

War Will Probably Break Up Cardinals

St. Louis Hailed as Having Punch, Pitching, Brightest Polish in Majors

By GAYLE TALBOT
 NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—If it were not for the probability that the war will break it up, the St. Louis Cardinals club that completed the job of wrecking the New York Yankees yesterday might within the next few years go tearing on to win ranking with the greatest teams in baseball history.

It is a son-of-a-gun of a baseball club—much better than any one suspected even when it was running wild in the closing stages of the National league race. There is no team in either league at this time with anything approaching the all-around punch, pitching and polish of the new world champions.

On the off chance that somebody might think we are going overboard on the bold young men of Manager Billy Southworth, a few figures might be in order:

Through yesterday's deciding game at the stadium, which was won 4-2 on a two-run homer by George Kurovski, rookie third baseman, in the ninth inning, the Cardinals won 47 of their last 57 contests in the 1942 season. That comes to an astounding winning average of .824 down the stretch.

They slugged and slashed their way to victory in their last six straight games in the league race, paused only to drop the world series opener in St. Louis, and then battered the Yankees into submission in four straight. Some time, some team might have set a record that looks comparable in print, but forgive us if we doubt that the competition was as tough as that bowled over by the Cardinals in their amazing drive to the top.

It is doubtful the Brooklyn Dodgers could have beaten the Yankees. They lacked pitching. As the series unfolded it became obvious that the Cardinals not only had all the dash and color which had become their hallmark, but that they also possessed great pitching in quantity. Mort Cooper, their biggest winner, was slugged from the box twice by the Yanks, yet they had the men who could take up the slack in Johnny Beazley, Ernie White and Max Lanier.

As for the Yankees, they simply ran into a bunch of game, hard-playing, hungry youngsters. After they won the second game at St. Louis, the Cardinals actually believed they would take three straight at the stadium here, and said so. Those of us who heard them thought it merely was youthful exuberance. We didn't quite know the Cardinals — then.

The most inexplicable collapse of the classic was contributed by Joe Gordon, the Yank second baseman. Standout of the '41 series, when he practically beat Brooklyn single-handed, Gordon made only two hits in 21 times at bat against Cardinal pitching and didn't shine particularly in the field. He and Phil Rizzuto did not make their first double play until the final game, whereas they stymied Brooklyn with seven a year ago. Little Rizzuto played the best all-around game for the Yanks, hammering eight hits in the five games and fielding cleverly.

EXPERT OPINION
 Looks as if old Mike Gonzales was the champion series forecaster . . . He said: "Maybe we lose one, maybe two, but no more." . . . This department hit the number of games right on the nose—but had the wrong team and plenty of company in picking the Yanks . . . Only five of the experts polled by the A. P. before the series named the Cards and no one said fewer than six games for them.

announced here today that X-rays taken of Center Steve Bodner did not show skull fractures or a concussion, as first feared. The Webfoot gridman was injured in the Oregon-WSC game at Pullman last Saturday and had to be carried to the train after the game. He did suffer painful cuts and bruises about the head, however.

The Oregons, under Coach John Warren, continued today to prepare for the traditional game against the University of Washington in Portland Saturday. Bodner, along with other players hurt in the 7-0 loss to the Cougars, may play against the Huskies.

Ramsey Praises Work of Mast, Blohm, Mayfield in Eureka Logger Fracas

The Pelicans met a good, tough team in the Eureka Loggers, Coach Frank Ramsey told members of the Quarterback club at their regular Monday noon knife and fork session in the Willard hotel yesterday.

The large coach praised the work of Fullback Don Mast, Center Phil Blohm and End Neil Mayfield, acting captain for the last which the Pelicans won, 26-8, for their third straight inter-sectional victory. Mast, he said, played a "great ball game" in pacing the Klamaths offensively. Phil Blohm, 215-pound center, played a "whale of a game" on defense, the huge coach said. Mayfield, acting captain for the encounter on the coast, "did a swell job in making difficult decisions on the field," Ramsey added.

The 255-pound coach and weekend center for Portland in the Northwest Pro league said the squad came through in good shape despite the many pile-ups and general rough character of the Logger contest.

Saturday. The game as a whole, according to Groesbeck, was, as all football this year, a matter of luck and the most reserves. And Oregon State had both.

Stanley Woodruff, acting KUHS principal, told the club that 200 tickets for the Medford game, a week from next Friday, will be put on sale at the chamber of commerce when they arrive some time this week.

Both Ramsey and Past President Bill Constans, who conducted the meeting, made urgent pleas for the volunteering of transportation for this Friday's game at Ashland. School buses cannot be used, they said. The team must leave here Friday morning. If any of the general public has a car available for the trip, they were asked to call Lee Jacobs at 5155 or Ramsey at the high school.

Cubs Topple Chisox, 2-1, In City Play

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Chicago Cubs won an extra inning game from the White Sox last night, 2-1, keeping alive their hopes for victory in the annual city series.

The win, second straight for the National leaguers, gave the Cubs a chance to extend the four of seven series to the limit with a victory tonight. The Sox won the first three encounters.

Claude Passeau, the Cubs ace, and the veteran, Ted Lyons, pitched scoreless ball until the eighth inning when the National leaguers put over one run only to see the Sox score the equalizer in the last of the ninth.

Phil Cavarretta's triple and Bob Sturgeon's fly accounted for one run in the 10th inning and it was the margin of victory.

Cards Spurn Taxis, Ride Nickel Subway From Park

By SID FEDER
 NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—A bunch of St. Louis Cardinals came bustling out of Yankee stadium, still boisterous at winning the world series, brushed off the cab drivers and headed for the subway and the nickel ride back to their hotel.

That is as good a way as any of leading into the possibility that all that "gallantry" and "gameness" of the crash-house gang came from that $6,192.50 waiting for each player at the finish of the 1942 series—and the Cards are a lean, hungry team.

This, incidentally, is not trying to take a thing away from the running Redbirds. They hit when they had to. They ran when it counted.

Just look at the way Johnny Beazley pulled himself out of two clutches yesterday. And how about that clinching homer by Whitey Kurovski? He's the player the Yankees tabbed as the "All America Out" before the series started.

But the reports are that the top-priced player on the young St. Louis outfit draws down in the neighborhood of $10,000.

This would be Terry Moore, the ghost of center field, who not only can—but does—catch everything within nine miles of him.

On the other hand, the Yankees are the highest priced club in baseball, with a payroll estimated at $300,000 a year. Their average salary is somewhere near $10,000.

REFUSAL
 LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP)—A demand by Adolph Hitler that Denmark agree to her "voluntary incorporation" into a bloc of model states as a showpiece of the Nazi new order has been rejected by the little monarchy, the Free Danish council here reported today.

The demand was said to have been accompanied by a threat that the gestapo would run Denmark if it were refused.
