They Keep Life Lines Open

Ships, singly, like the one above, and in convoys, carry precious cargoes of vital materials and merchandise over stormy, mine infested, submarine ridden routes to Archangel, the Aleutian islands, to Iceland, England, and other far corners of the globe. They are manned by seamen who daily risk their lives to get supplies through to the fighting fronts of a global war. Danger doesn't make these brave men shiver, but cold does. It is to alleviate the suffering of these unsung heroes in bitter cold weather, that the furriers of the nation are making a drive for worn fur pieces with which warm vests may be made for the sailors.

Furs Collected to Keep Men Of Merchant Marine Warm

"Neither storms, nor mines, torpedoes, bombs nor icy seas can keep our merchant marine from the fulfillment of its duties." There is a slogan befitting those forgotten heroes of World War II, men who brave death in an icy, watery grave every inch of the way to their destinations in lands across the briny deep. These are the men who convey the vital supplies of food and munitions, tanks, guns and planes, oils and rubber to the far flung battlefronts in every section of the world. They are the heroes who "keep them sailing" no matter how often their ships are torpedoed from under them. They know better than anyone else how important it is to maintain a continuous supply line to our own fighting men and those of our allies.

In order that these brave men may breast the icy storms safely, their clothing must be the warmest possible to obtain. To this end, the furriers of the nation have pledged their assistance in the gathering of worn furs of all descriptions, no longer of service to their owners, from which to fabricate fur-lined vests for protection of the men of the merchant marine.

Local fur stores, Craig's and Cummings Fur shop, are participating in the drive for discarded fur pieces and have set up space to accommodate the influx of materials during the next several weeks. All collected pieces will be shipped at once to the nation's fur center in New York City, where each piece will be thoroughly cleaned and renovated by fur cleaners of that city. Not a penny is being charged for the work, either. Some 5000 fur workers are devoting a total of 10 hours each to their contribution to the cause. These hours are spent in making the fur vests so badly needed by the men who man the merchandise convoys around the world.

PUT Off 'Til Tomorrow What You Can Do Today

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 8 (AP)—Jack Spears couldn't decide whether to tell his wife about a telegram from the navy department reporting their son, Donald, killed in action. Just a few weeks before, shock caused by the death of their 13-year-old daughter, Barbara Jean, had almost caused Mrs. Spears' death. Her husband feared the new blow might have a disastrous effect.

Finally, he decided to keep Donald's death a secret for a while. Tuesday another telegram came. It read: "Arrived Charlestown Navy Yard okay. All is well. Donald."

TROUBLED BY WARTIME CONSTIPATION?

Lack of "bulk" may be your difficulty

If you're feeling "low," dragged out, not quite up to par, consider this: In these war days your living habits are all upset. Meals especially are likely to be hurried, improperly balanced. And you're apt to forget the importance of adequate "bulk" in your diet. Yet the lack of this one food essential is one of the common causes of wartime constipation. For this trouble, medicinal laxatives are but temporary remedies; they don't get at the cause. If this is your trouble, you need more "bulk"—and KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, a delicious crisp cereal, supplies it in tempting, appetizing form. Eat ALL-BRAN regularly; drink plenty of water and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

Willkie Surprised at Card World Series Win in Talk With Army Pilots in China

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN CHINA, Oct. 8 (AP) Wendell L. Willkie, accompanied by Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, Wednesday visited a base of the United States army air forces in China and talked with the commander, Brigadier General Claire L. Chennault, and several other officers and men. "These boys are a long way from home," Chennault told him, "and want to hear from America."

Sprawled at ease in a straw-thatched pavilion at the edge of a field lined with fighter planes, Willkie asked questions of his own and answered those of the 100 or more officers and men who crowded around.

Asked "how are they coming up in Russia," he replied: "Things there are very serious, but they're putting up a great fight."

Asked if the Russians only wanted equipment, he answered:

"Obviously Russia would like to have a second front."

When the talk got around to baseball, Willkie said he was amazed by the Cardinals' victory—because "when I left home the Dodgers were four games ahead."

"I fretted myself to death," he said, "and then learned this morning the outcome of the series."

Once he was asked, "Is there any possibility of getting some women's auxiliaries over here?" "I thought your boys came over here to fight," he quipped back. Another wanted to know, "do they still make American beer?"

"They were when I left because I had a drink," Willkie assured. He asked one of the crowd, "how long have you been here?" "Three months," was the reply. "And you?" he asked another. "Five months—too long from home," he was told. Willkie was told mail from home formerly came irregularly but now was arriving about once a month.
