Vows were exchanged before an altar banked with white chrysanthemums and large baskets of the same blossoms were placed on either side of the railing.

The bride, given in marriage by Captain Lynn Fairbanks, was charming in traditional white satin, the gown fashioned with a draped bodice, snug fitting girdle, long sleeves which were puffed at the shoulder and a long full skirt which ended in a train. Her Mary Stuart cap, edged in white lace, held a fingertip length of illusion net. The bride's flowers were fashioned in a sheaf of white blossoms tied with narrow satin ribbons.

Miss Peggy Johnson, sister of the bride, wore a frock of white satin and silk chiffon with bands of the satin on the skirt. Her Juliet cap of white lace and an old fashioned nosegay of white flowers completed her costume.

Lieutenant Norman S. Murray was best man.

Ushers were Lieutenants Harold Deutsch, Frank Haig, Edward Davidson and Arthur W. MacMurray, all stationed with the groom at Fort Ord.

As the bridal party left the church a "jeep" was awaiting them at the door and they rode to the Officers' club where a reception was given for Lieutenant Hotchkiss and his bride. Later there was a dinner for the wedding party at the Normandy Inn in Carmel.
