mitties would expedite hearings on the necessary legislation.

Second Front Eyed
Mr. Roosevelt, who suggested that legislation might also be needed to solve the manpower problem on the home front, alluded indirectly to a second fighting front again by declaring that one of the major decisions of strategy already made "relates to the necessity of diverting enemy forces from Russia and China to other theatres of war by new offensives against Germany and Japan."

"All of our combat units that go overseas," he said, "must consist of young, strong men who have had thorough training. A division that has an average age of 23 or 24 is a better fighting unit than one which has an average age of 33 or 34."
"The more of such troops we have in the field, the sooner the war will be won, and the smaller will be the cost in casualties."

"Up-Grade"
The chief executive, after reviewing his recent inspection tour and reporting that allied strength was "on the up-grade" while that of the axis was waning, declared the objective of today was clear and realistic.

"It is to destroy completely the military power of Germany, Italy and Japan to such good purpose," he said, "that their threat against us and all the other United Nations cannot be revived a generation hence."

"We Will Win"
"... And we Americans and our allies are going to win," he declared "and do not let anyone tell you anything different."

The president, who said that "we are getting ahead of our enemies" in the battles of transportation and production, declared that in order to keep stepping up production it will be necessary to solve "a formidable problem in the mobilization of manpower."

"Enough People"
"It is not that we do not have enough people in this country to do the job," he said. "The problem is to have the right numbers of the right people in the right places at the right time.

"We are learning to ration materials; and we must now learn to ration manpower. . . . Community efforts, examples of which he said he had noted on his trip, should be made where necessary to help farmers harvest their crops. He continued:

Legislation Eyed
"It may be that all of our volunteer effort—however well intentioned and well administered—will not suffice to solve the problem. In that case, we shall have to adopt new legislation. If this is necessary, I do not believe that the American people will shrink from it."

Discussing strategic plans of the United Nations, including those for a second front, Mr. Roosevelt said:
"The military and naval plans of the United States are made by the joint staff of the army and navy which is constantly in session in Washington. The chiefs of this staff are Admiral Leahy, General Marshall, Admiral King and General Arnold. They meet and confer regularly with representatives of the British joint staff, and with representatives of Russia, China, the Netherlands, Poland, Norway, the British dominions and other nations working in the common cause."

"As I have said before, many major decisions of strategy have been made. One of them—on which we have all agreed—relates to the necessity of diverting enemy forces from Russia and China to other theatres of war by new offensives against Germany and Japan. An announcement of how these offensives are to be launched, and when, and where, cannot be broadcast over the radio at this time."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP)—Swiftly following President Roosevelt's declaration that the draft age would have to be lowered, congressional leaders cleared the way today for house action this week on legislation to induct 18 and 19 year olds into the armed forces.

After a conference with Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex) and Majority Leader McCormack (D-Mass.), Chairman May (D-Ky) announced that the military committee would begin hearings on the bill at 6 a. m. PWT tomorrow, "and sit all night if necessary" in order to get it to the floor by Saturday at the latest.

Earlier in the day Secretary of War Stimson stressed a need for "exceptional soldiers" and asked that legislation for drafting the 18 and 19 year olds be expedited.

WAR LABOR LUMBER BODY SETS POLICY

SEATTLE, Oct. 13 (AP)—In a statement of policy, the newly-created Pacific coast lumber commission of the National War Labor board asserted today before plunging into a series of hearings to settle wage, hour and labor conditions in the Douglas fir industry that labor disputes must not hamper production.

The five-man board unanimously approved this statement by Ben H. Kizer, Spokane, public representative on the commission, at a forenoon session: "Lumber is the number one industry of the Pacific coast. It is our greatest single contribution in material to the war effort."

The commission began hearings this afternoon. Temporary headquarters will be here until Oct. 26 when permanent quarters are set up at Portland, the commission decided this morning.

CRABBING? Not at all. Whatever the civilian has to put up with in this war will be duck soup and peaches and cream and lavender and old lace in comparison with what the boys in the service have to put up with.

Any civilian who is caught kicking ought to be thrown in the creek.

SIDELIGHT in closing: Two sailors going down the street, slightly fuddled. They have eaten something that disagreed with them.

Two navy MP's following them. From time to time, they heft their persuaders and look at the sailors appraisingly. And with a hopeful glint in their eyes. Every time either sailor, bearing up under what he ate that disagreed with him, makes a faltering step, you can see the MP's rubbing their hands in pleased anticipation. When the sailor straightens up and goes on his way unoffendingly, the MP's give recognizable signs of acute disappointment.

One can't help hoping that whatever it was the sailors ate that distressed them may not prove to be serious and that they may reach their quarters in the best of health and spirits and without untoward incident.

But it's plain to be seen that the MP's don't share this pious hope.

Missing Woman Returns Home From Deer Hunt

The sheriff's office was informed late Monday that Mrs. Vic Butler, reported lost on a hunting trip to Brownworth creek, had returned to her home in the Altamont district. No details were given. Mrs. Butler was reported lost Sunday.

Flow of deer carcasses from the hills had dwindled to a trickle Tuesday after the first rush Sunday and Monday.

A local cold storage plant, which usually is jammed with 100 or more deer by this time, reported only 60 carcasses brought in since the season opened last Saturday. Tuesday's arrivals totaled seven.

Italians in Fight
Italian troops and tanks appeared in the fight.

The Russians said their arc of fire held off the invaders after a minor penetration of a single street yesterday. Red army rifle and artillery batteries held the Germans northwest of the city and in the suburb, discharges said. Russian motorized infantry was reported checking all enemy attacks against the left flank south of the burning and smoke-hazed city.

New Messerschmitt 109-G's, an improved German pursuit type, remained in action over Stalingrad, but the army newspaper Red Star said the Russian air force had found the answer to them by fighting in layer formations and had downed several.

Amid scenes of desolation, Stalingrad's soldiers dug in with heavy overcoats as protection against the seasonal chill. Photographs of long lines of German prisoners showed they were already wearing their winter uniforms.

books containing coupons for mileage at the rate of 2880 per year. Applications for supplemental rations, which the OPA said would receive "most careful scrutiny," may be filed any time after the basic "A" book has been received.

To qualify for a supplemental ration, the applicant must show that he needs more than 150 miles per month of occupational driving, and that he has formed a car-sharing club for carrying three or more persons, in addition to himself, to and from work regularly.

If the applicant has not formed a car-sharing club, he must prove that alternative means of transportation are inadequate, and that it is impossible for him to carry others.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said the plan was designed to reduce the national average passenger car mileage to 5000 a year, as recommended by the Baruch committee.
