

LAKE O' WOODS CASE INVOLVES TWO BROTHERS

Briggs, Ashland, resort operator. At the lake with them was Mrs. Roy Taylor and her two small children.

Stop at Camp
According to the investigations made by the Klamath officers, the two men went to Ashland Tuesday and obtained a truck load of groceries for winter supply. They returned to the lake, unloaded the truck, and ate dinner.

About 7:30 p. m. they stopped at a government surveyors' camp for a brief conversation, and then went to the resort dock where they started a small kicker on the boat and went out in the lake. Officers think they might have gone out to spotlight fish or deer. They took along a rifle.

Fall to Return
That was the last that was seen or heard of them.

When they failed to return that night, Mrs. Taylor notified Briggs at Ashland. On Wednesday, a search was made by the government survey party at the request of Mrs. Taylor. On Wednesday night, Briggs went to the lake, and then notified the sheriff's office at Klamath Falls.

The officers said that the lake was calm on Tuesday night and they could find no reason for an accident to the boat used by the men.

Hat Identified

They said a hat was found at the east edge of the lake by a woman summer home owner, and the hat was identified by Mrs. Taylor as belonging to her husband. The car was found on the east shore about a quarter of a mile away from the hat, and two floor boards were discovered, one on the east and one on the north shore. The boat equipment was identified as part of the boat used by the Taylor brothers.

The boat was of a green color and officers said that it was partially submerged it would blend with the color of the water and would be difficult to find.

Summer home owners said the men were expected to come to Klamath Falls Friday to make final arrangements for caring for property at the lake.

Picking Army to Work This Weekend

Many townspeople are expected in the potato fields again the coming weekend, according to Jack Almetery, manager of the USES.

He said that no special transportation arrangements had been made but that farmers are expected to call at the employment offices, Third and Main streets, early Saturday morning, for pickers.

Almetery added that satisfactory progress is being made in the harvest through the widespread help given farmers.

that would stuff a mattress, peel off the necessary total of ducats, pay their shot and go happily on.

THE eating situation here is bedlam itself.

The dining room of one of the big hotels will serve as an example. When the doors open in the morning the captain, a firm but tactful young woman, takes her place. The tables fill up in a flash.

Thereafter she lists applicants in order of priority on long cards she carries in her hand, and as vacancies occur at tables she calls out the name at the top of the list.

This goes on until the doors finally close at night.

THE stream of eaters and would-be eaters flows endlessly, like a river.

To supply this bottomless demand, the kitchen has a cook and an assistant cook from the old days. The rest of the kitchen help is such as can be picked from the streets from day to day. This, a waitress explains, is a red-letter day, a Mexican "fry cook" having shown up and consented to work for a while.

The waitresses, generally speaking, are quick, courteous and friendly, doing wonders in the way of soothing the irascibilities of hungry customers. (And nobody is harder to handle than an American citizen who is hungry and roaring for food.)

Again the female of the species stepping into the breach and getting away with it completely. In this emergency, thank God again for the women!

STALINGRAD IN FRESH DANGER; VOLGA REACHED section on the west bank of the Volga.

"The coming winter makes the Germans hurry," said Red Star. "The vile enemy aims to capture the city at any cost."

Hundreds of German corpses littered the streets and more than 36 Nazi tanks were smashed as the Russians beat off seven attacks in the city yesterday, the soviet command said, but despite their losses the invaders pressed forward in a climactic attempt to fulfill Hitler's boast that Stalingrad was doomed.

The Berlin radio asserted that the siege armies had "broken the cornerstone of the Russian defense system in the northern sector" and occupied the west bank of the Volga along a two-mile front.

A Nazi broadcast admitted that the Russians still held the down-sector of the city, however, while the soviet command declared the new outburst had cost the invaders more than 1500 dead.

The bill approved unanimously by the senate committee was sponsored by Senator Gurney (R-S. D.) who announced that the measure would go to the senate floor Monday.

Gurney's bill lowers the minimum draft age from 20 to 18 and provides that high school students may be deferred until the end of the last half of the academic year.

And from San Francisco came the word that a warrant was sent early Friday charging the DuBois couple with kidnaping of the child. Municipal Judge Thomas F. Prendergast fixed bail for the two at $50,000 bond or $25,000 cash, each.

Vivian, unharmed, was found in a Grants Pass school Thursday afternoon. It was at almost the same time that the DuBois were being questioned in Red Bluff.

Klamath Couple Play Lead in Kidnap Capture

He had written Oregon 118-400 on the envelope and just to make sure he pasted the number on the windshield of our truck which was to leave then with Matt Platzer, the driver.

"We watched the cars all the way north even though we felt the kidnapers would be foolish to be on the highway during the day time. We had just left Red Bluff and were at the top of Nine-Mile hill, nine miles north, when we saw an old green Ford coupe going south and trying to pass two cars but our car prevented that. We immediately noticed the license and turned right around and drove back to Red Bluff, passing the coupe on the way.

"At Red Bluff we got out of the car and just then a state police officer, Don Phillips, came around the corner and we told him about the car. He got hold of a Red Bluff policeman, Gorham Bloxham, they jumped in the officers' car and drove out of town toward Chilo. We were right after them. They found the green coupe all right and stopped it just across the bridge south of Red Bluff.

"The two in the car, they were dirty, unkempt, the man was unshaven, and the car was full of bedding and things, the two told officers they had come all the way from Portland that day. It was after 7:30 then. But the police took them back to Red Bluff for questioning and they notified San Francisco officials. The two didn't confess until 11 o'clock last night. I'd say the woman was about 25 and the man about 40," Mrs. O'Neill said.

And from San Francisco came the word that a warrant was sent early Friday charging the DuBois couple with kidnaping of the child. Municipal Judge Thomas F. Prendergast fixed bail for the two at $50,000 bond or $25,000 cash, each.

Vivian, unharmed, was found in a Grants Pass school Thursday afternoon. It was at almost the same time that the DuBois were being questioned in Red Bluff.

In San Francisco, Mrs. Louise Miller, the child's mother, cried for joy when informed that Vivian was safe. Later she talked by telephone with Vivian in Grants Pass. Said the child's father, "I'm the luckiest guy in the world." He also talked with his child from the Call-Bulletin office to the Grants Pass Courier office.

According to Red Bluff authorities the father accompanied San Francisco police inspectors to Red Bluff and came face to face with DuBois in the sheriff's office. He had considerable difficulty in controlling himself and officers had to hold him at one time when he muttered, "Just let me have one crack at him, that's all I want, just one crack at the guy."

In a confession which Mr. and Mrs. DuBois signed, the man described the kidnaping of the child from near her home. He said he had always wanted a child of his own and took Vivian to satisfy this desire. He said he told his wife that the girl was his by a former marriage. They abandoned the youngster in Grants Pass because they became frightened upon reading newspaper accounts of the kidnaping.

DuBois, 39, and his wife, 23, were married last May. They gave their home address as Portland to satisfy his desire. He said he told his wife that the girl was his by a former marriage. They abandoned the youngster in Grants Pass because they became frightened upon reading newspaper accounts of the kidnaping.

When Mrs. Morris Miller, Vivian's mother, was brought to the phone to talk to her baby, unintelligible childish sounds came over the wire from Grants Pass when Mrs. Miller repeated, "Hello, honey, honey this is mamma!" The child seemed happy and repeated frequently that her "new daddy" had promised to buy her a doll.
