SUMMIT SCHOOL OPENS WITH NINE

CRESCENT LAKE—Monday, October 19, was opening day for the Cascade Summit school, which started with nine pupils in a building near the Roy Temple residence. The teacher, Miss Nancy Firestone, from Ashland, is living with the Temples.

The parents of Cascade Summit have breathed a sigh of relief to find that school matters have arranged themselves, with some prodding, so that no longer will they have to worry about keeping the two-mile stretch of road between the community and the Willamette highway passable for vehicles. Last winter Roy Temple kept it open for the school bus most of the winter by using his tractor.

News Notes and Comment

By PAT MORGAN

Nadine Palmerton, editor of the KUHS Krater; Isabel Corr, news editor; Betty Lea Daily, advertising manager, and Clifford Rowe, Krater advisor, all came back to our good old town Sunday after a busy and exciting weekend at the state convention at Eugene.

At the conference, our own high school's newspaper received third place, with the Corvallis high school paper coming in second and Franklin high of Portland sitting on the top with first place.

The Krater heads went to the football game Saturday between the University of Idaho and the University of Oregon and they attended a banquet last Friday night. The girls stayed at the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority house.

The Honor society met yesterday afternoon to talk about the club pins and to discuss requirements for new members. The result was that juniors or seniors who have the required grades in their activities will be given invitations to join the club if they wish to.

The dinner for the school board that was scheduled for last night was postponed until November 9 because Arnold Grapp, superintendent, had to leave town on special business. The girls in the Home Economics club are to cook and prepare the dinner for the board. Oh boy, what a pleasure! Now don't take that wrong, please. What is meant is that it would be a great pleasure to consume a dinner cooked by all the young ladies in the Home Ec. club.

Yesterday noon, Robert Clammer, a little freshman, was standing in front of the door to Mr. Ted Russell's room, holding up the foot of a brass bedstead. At first it looked like Mr. Russell had ordered a bed to be put in his room, but when asked, the freshman replied that the bedstead was brought to school for the scrap drive and that he would bring the rest of the bed in pieces. Now, that young lad is really going in for salvaging.

scrap for our country and in a big way. If every student in KUHS did just half as much as that lad has done, we would go over the top of the drive in no time at all. So, come on, dig out every old bit of scrap that you don't need and contribute it to your country.

Harkness Fined on Hunting Charge

TULELAKE—Kenneth Harkness, Newell, charged with illegal possession of a forked horn deer, pleaded guilty before Judge Frank Mosebar of Modoc county last weekend and paid his fine of $50. The arrest was made by Ira J. Taylor, assistant warden of the California fish and game commission.
