It Looks Like That Pound Of Coffee Every 5 Weeks Is the Most You'll Have

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (AP)—Office of price administration spokesmen offered little hope Tuesday that the announced coffee ration of one pound every five weeks for adults could be liberalized in the near future.

The ration, effective after midnight of Nov. 28, was fixed only after careful consideration of the imports expected from future shipments, spokesmen said.

Little margin was left between supply and anticipated demand, these officials who declined to be quoted by name, said, since it has been ascertained that about 92 per cent of all American families are coffee users. This appeared to leave little leeway for any subsequent adjustment based on failure of demand to absorb available supplies.

Some coffee merchandising circles reported that 35 to 40 cups could be obtained from each pound of coffee. Luther Reid, chief of rationing information, estimated 45, but even this figured out at less than 1 1/3 cups a day for every person over 15.

The rationing was expected to spur a search for substitute beverages which already is under way. These probably will not include tea or cocoa since black tea sales have been cut 50 per cent, green tea is virtually unobtainable, and cocoa consumption has been cut 40 per cent.

Reid noted there was nothing to prevent a housewife from buying chicory and mixing it with coffee to stretch out the supply. In some parts of the country, notably New Orleans, coffee ready-mixed with chicory is commonly sold. The ration allowance of such a mixture is the same as that for coffee—that is, the chicory is counted as part of the ration.

Processors have been experimenting for some time with such adulterants as toasted bran, rye, malt, Mexican chick peas, barley and other cereals. Adulteration is permitted if the package is so labeled.

Klamath, and E. H. Cochran of Chiloquin.

Other training meetings in old time swing to be held this week will be at Bly, Tuesday, October 27; girls' gymnasium at Klamath Union high school Wednesday, October 28; Merrill community hall Thursday, October 29; and Bonanza Friday, October 30.
