worst injured being taken to the Harrison hospital. The tornado left the town helpless.

The power plant was destroyed, forcing rescue workers to work by torch light, flashlight, candles, or even matches. The telephone system remained in operation through use of an emergency battery system.

Little to Do
An eight-man medical detachment from Camp Robinson was ordered to Berryville, with medical supplies. An appeal for assistance was sent to the Red Cross at Little Rock.

The city hall and court house, two of the few buildings remaining intact in the business district, were converted into emergency hospitals, but in the early hours there was little the workers could do for the sufferers—no medical supplies, no nurses, and only three doctors to care for the scores of injured. Fallen trees and other debris delayed out of town relief crews.

Escapes
Some of the escapes were amazing. Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fanning were uninjured when the tornado wrecked their bedroom, but the featherbed on which they were sleeping and the comfort which they had over them vanished.

KNOX REPORTS WITHDRAWAL OF JAP FLEET

American torpedo boats in the last two days scored a torpedo hit on a Japanese destroyer engaged in reinforcing enemy troops on the island.

This was the first disclosure that the enemy still was pouring troops ashore, bolstering his already formidable contingents for the attack on the prize air base.

The communique said land fighting for the past 48 hours had been restricted to small skirmishes, but U. S. warplanes continued to bomb and strafe enemy positions west of the airfield and destroyed two more Japanese seaplanes.

Either for reasons of military secrecy or because of blackout communications, the navy in Washington divulged no fresh information or movements of the Japanese fleet in the critical south sea battle zone.

The situation suggested that a terrific Japanese naval assault might break shortly against admittedly outnumbered U. S. warships in the Solomon Islands area, although other reports have indicated that the powerful enemy squadron of battleships and aircraft carriers may have been seeking to skirt the Solomons and descend upon American bases in the New Hebrides and Fiji Islands.

On Guadalcanal, the navy reported, American defenders broke up three more Japanese attacks on October 27 (island time) and there was no indication that the enemy had encroached further on their narrow beachhead.

Berlin Says Major Convoy Battle Raging in Atlantic

BERLIN, (From German Broadcasts), Oct. 30 (AP)—The German high command declared in a special communique today that U-boats in the north Atlantic had "attacked a fully-laden convoy on its way to Britain, sinking nine ships totaling 68,500 tons." (This report had no confirmation from any allied source.) "Several more ships were damaged by torpedo hits," the announcement said of the convoy attack which was declared to have been carried out "despite extremely bad weather conditions and fierce defense."

The high command said that six other allied ships aggregating 32,425 tons had been sunk by submarines in Atlantic waters between the United States and Britain.

"Operations still are going on," it added.

Bill to be Presented
The three far-reaching propositions generally were aimed at erasing what some of their sponsors termed "jealousy" in the fighting forces, "red taping" in government and "duplication of effort" and slow action in congress.

Rep. Maas (R-Minn.), ranking minority member of the house naval committee and himself a marine colonel, proposed the amalgamation of the army, navy and marine corps into one fighting force, and said he would offer legislation to put it into effect unless the administration beat him to it.

Lumber Shortage Starts Survey Of Millwork

Lumber mills have fallen behind in orders from 20 to 120 days. He estimated the overall deficit of manpower in the industry would amount to 14 per cent of normal.

"With less manpower, a curtailment of production has taken place though the demand for lumber has grown by leaps and bounds," Upson said. "It all adds up to a lumber shortage."

Mathias W. Niewenhouse, assistant chief of the branch, said that in order to avert needless shutdown, dislocations and hardships to the industry, "a program of concentration is in the making."

The main features of the plan, similar to those already introduced in other war industries, would have some mills producing exclusively for war purposes and others taking care of essential civilian needs.

fort to reach the Dvina river near Vitebsk.

At the same time, the reports said, another shock group would set out for Rzhev southward to Vyazma, then wheel toward Smolensk in an attempt to form a junction with the northern wing.

Heavy Russian air forces were said to be massing in the Rzhev-Toropets region and better weather was reported to have improved roads sufficiently for heavy materiel movement. The agency said the Germans already were trying to forestall the offensive with heavy aerial bombardment of concentration centers and rail lines leading from Moscow and Kalinin into the areas.

Stalingrad Holds

On the soviet front, red army headquarters announced that Russian tanks had won a critical battle of armored forces in Stalingrad's northside factory district and reported that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's relief of the city was under way. German defenses in the Volga-Don corridor.

It was the 67th day in the siege of Stalingrad.

How near the city Marshal Timoshenko's relief forces had advanced in their drive against the 40-mile German "barricade" which guards the main nazi siege armies on the north. Red army troops have been hacking into the nazi flank for several weeks.

Reds Counter

In the Caucasus, the Russians conceded a new setback on the Nalchik plateau—the second in 24 hours—as the Germans threw large numbers of tanks into an assault apparently aimed at reaching the Georgian military highway to Tiflis.

The German high command admitted that the Russians were counter-attacking in the mountains north and south of Tuapse, but declared they had been repulsed.

REGISTRATION OF WOMEN FORESEEN

Registration would be required to authorize this canvass of women power.

Probably that would mean, the president said, that the survey could not be made before the end of the year. But, replying to a question, he said he did not think it should be implied that national service legislation necessarily would be delayed also until that time.

Need Authority

On Capitol Hill today the American Federation of Labor joined the CIO in urging centralization of war production and manpower matters under a civilian coordinating board.

"We need definite grants of authority to a top board which should be our strategy board, with a clear, straight line of authority extending to the agencies coordinated," William M. Green, AFL president, testified.

Dangerous Nonsense

Earlier CIO President Philip Murray had recommended unification of federal functions under a "conference committee of the nation."

Such a committee, Murray told a senate labor subcommittee on manpower, should include members of congress and representatives of the government, management, labor and agriculture.

Without recognition of the close relationship between manpower and production, Murray declared, "a discussion of a labor freeze or a labor draft is not merely futile nonsense, it is dangerous nonsense."

Pros, Cons of Proposed City Charter Talked

between introduction and passage. This feature alone, he asserted, is enough to justify defeat of the charter.

Complaint

He objected also to the qualifications for holding city office, asserting that anyone having a "beneficial interest" in property is qualified so far as property is concerned to hold office under the new charter. Under this section, he said, anyone having a mere lease on property could hold office. The old charter, he stated, required that a person be an "owner" of property to hold office here.

The attorney also complained to provisions whereby assessment procedure is to be handled by ordinance and not in the charter.

Appointive Office

Leo Jacobs, a member of the charter committee, then took the floor and discussed briefly the question of civil service in the new charter. He said that full provision for this function was not made in the charter, but there was no intention of leaving it out. The city council, he said, is committed to adoption by ordinance of all the civil service provisions of the old charter.

Jacobs also pointed out that the charter provides for one new appointive office. That is the office of recorder, previously handled by the police judge.

Ordinances Possible

W. O. Smith, long-time member of city budget boards, then came to the defense of the charter as proposed, calling the objection "tempest in a teapot." He said that technical faults can be found with the old charter or any such document, but that in general the new charter is a basic authority and that he believes it can be safely passed and will bring efficiency into the functions of the city government.

He said that after the charter is passed, the city council in 30 or 40 ordinances can provide for virtually all the regulations needed in the city, eliminating unnecessary material and codifying that which should be continued.

Mitchell Tillotson, local banker, then called attention to financial features of the new charter which he regards as subject to question.

He said that under the new charter, there is not sufficient protection thrown around the bond retirement money, and that a council could use this money as it sees fit. This, he said, might injure the city's credit. He also said the charter does not give proper authority to the council for borrowing money between funds, and the city might at times have to rely upon the issuance of protested warrants when it has money available which might be borrowed from its own funds if the charter granted this authority.

That concluded the discussion. The charter will be on the ballot at the general election, November 3.

C. A. Dunn was chairman of the day.
