Comment on Measures

COMPLAINT was heard among sportsmen here Thursday that they did not believe the public fully understood the net fishing ban on the Tuesday ballot and that many people voted "no" when they meant to vote "yes."

The measure was defeated in the state and the vote in this county was: Yes, 1701; No, 3553.

Sportsmen said such an overwhelming vote in favor of commercial fishermen in this game fishing country did not make sense. Some sportsmen with whom we have talked believe they themselves voted the "wrong" way on the measure.

What seems to have happened was this: Some voters who are opposed to net fishing of steelhead fish thought of this bill as a straight yes and no vote on the question of net fishing. By voting no, they thought they were voting against net fishing.

In fact, a no vote favored net fishing, for the bill would have banned and restricted net fishing. The Oregon Wildlife Federation and other sportsmen's groups wanted a Yes vote.

This newspaper has remarked before that this type of bill should not be on the ballot. An intelligent decision upon it requires special knowledge which the average voter does not have. Those opposed to a measure have a terrific advantage at the polls because if people do not understand a bill they usually vote against it. Add to that such confusion as apparently existed in the minds of some sportsmen here, and you have a situation that does not make for sensible and proper decisions.

The trouble with direct legislation is that it can be invoked on any legislative act and by just about anybody who will get out and hunt for petition signers.

Oregon's legislators will get more pay hereafter, as a result of the passage of a constitutional amendment at the polls Tuesday. The wage will be increased from $3 a day for 40 days to $8 a day for 50 days.

People who anticipate Oregon will have a better legislature as a result of the pay increase will probably be disappointed. Oregon has had exceptionally good legislatures in the past, even though the members were required to make personal sacrifices to serve. Maybe that was because the kind of men who would make the sacrifices make better legislators.

The property tax reduction feature of the income tax diversion measure probably attracted enough votes to put that measure over. It carried in this county. School teachers, PTA's and similar groups gave the proposal solid backing.

There are some features of this rather loosely-drawn measure that may bring up technical difficulties. On the other hand, this is not a constitutional amendment, and the legislature may be able to correct defects.

The cigarette tax got what it deserved—defeat. The tax was unnecessary, and imposed an additional levy on a commodity already heavily taxed by the federal government.

We are pleased that the amendment preventing diversion of gas and motor vehicle taxes was adopted by the people. This makes permanent a sound principle which we have always defended.

The rural credits loan repeal passed, as it should have done, but there was a heavy vote against it. Probably few of those who opposed could tell why, except that they did not understand it and therefore took what they regarded as the "safest course."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5—The Japs were chased away from Guadalcanal again, but they will be back.

Their last sea sally was made up of about 30 ships, a sizeable portion of their fleet, so it is reasonable to expect that the next time they come they will be in even greater numbers.

That they must come back is certain, because they have committed themselves to the support of the troops they have landed.

A tough and dangerous continuing fight for the control of our remote foothold, therefore must be expected, with the final issue in doubt.

ABOUT EVEN

Our chances look good, some better than our heavy losses in ships may have led casual news readers to suspect. The loss of the three cruisers we can stand fairly well, but the sinking of those two aircraft carriers was a damaging blow.

The Japs lost two carriers also (one damaged, one sunk) and they are not in a position to stand it as well as we can. They have but two or three regular standard carriers left, two large and one small. In addition, they probably have several carriers converted from merchant liners, which are not efficient for strong action. Give them a minimum of five and a maximum of nine, only two of which are top-rating flat tops.

The official figures show we have three regular carriers from the number with which we started the war, several converted and several building.

The carrier is the main striking implement of sea action, as was shown again in the Solomons tussle. All our sea losses, except those of the two carriers sunk by submarines, were due to air action and, in the latest fight, all ship losses on both sides were wrought by carrier based aircraft.

So in this main striking force we are about even, although we have the edge because the responsibility for attack rests up on the Japanese.

DECISION AT SEA

The land fighting has been ferocious, savage, with few prisoners taken on either side. Apparently it took the marines a little while to get accustomed to the fighting methods of the Japanese, but as the Japs apparently wanted it that way, they are getting it.

Obviously they have no superior strength on land.

So the fight on the sea is likely to decide the issue.

LOOKS GOOD

MacArthur's strong left arm on the Pacific front has meanwhile been punching the Japs back to the place where their northern shore bases in New Guinea are in danger.

His recapture of the Kokoda airfield has put him in position to open a new area of fighting northward from that spot. Furthermore, the Jap tactics of flanking and infiltration have been stopped.

It is apparent also MacArthur has been getting more planes, because he has been hitting the Jap bases at Rabaul with increasing regularity.

That front looks good.

WAITED IN VAIN

Winter has closed down on the Jap possibilities of an attack on the Amur river line, just as it is freezing Hitler's drive in Russia. But the Japs still have a formidable force in there, and action is yet possible.

What seems to have happened there is that the Japs got themselves all ready for a drive, expecting the fall of Stalingrad and collapse of the Caucasus, but waited in vain.

They may not try an attack as long as Russia is still a fighting force, which means for this winter at least.

The United States imported 59,594 pounds of lime oil during the first half of 1940.

In order to produce these vast quantities of war equipment we are obliged to build new factories and then more new factories. That, in itself, calls for the expenditure of huge totals of manpower and raw materials.

The time will come when all this expansion will have been taken care of and we shall have to provide only replacement and maintenance. The British are reaching that point now. We shall reach it sooner or later.

WICKARD ASKS DEFERMENT OF FARM WORKERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Wickard told a senate military committee today that essential farm labor should be given draft deferment to assure maintenance of agricultural production, but failed to express an opinion on any pending legislative proposals for dealing with the manpower problem.

The secretary declared that "we are losing our most efficient agricultural workers very rapidly" and warned that unless means were found to keep "skilled, managerial help on the farms, all the unskilled workers you can place there won't help in this situation."

Halt Hiring

Wickard estimated that 1,600,000 men have left the farms in the last year and said about 60 per cent went into industry and the balance into the armed forces.

He suggested that congress take steps to prevent war industries from hiring men granted deferment as essential farm workers.

Wickard said a longer work week in industry than 40 hours might relieve the "drain on agriculture" of industrial labor taken from the farm.

Longer Hours

This was in response to a question by Senator Thomas (R-Idaho) whether it would relieve the farm labor shortage to "change back from a 40 to a 48-hour week."

The secretary explained that the work usually was considered the number of hours a worker put in before he began drawing overtime pay and that the war industries already were working their men from 42 to 50 hours a week. He suggested that the men, with overtime pay, might work still longer hours, since farm labor worked 60 hours or more.

behind the president, but we've got to show the president that he is wrong in a lot of things."

Rep. Manasco (D-Ala.) declared that it "is high time that we call to the attention of some of our department heads that our enemies will not wait until we create a utopia here at home, while our boys are dying on land and sea."

In the senate, McNary also spoke out against what he termed "the threat of manpower mobilization" under a centralized authority and called compulsory mobilization "the most dictatorial thing ever conceived by the American mind."

"Democracy was founded upon respect for the home and the hearth," he continued. "The taking of a man from one section to another arbitrarily will be resented."

He said he would "have more to say" on that subject later.

Curri's

SOMETHING entirely new and different in the way of softening lotions, cleansing agents and germicides is what I ran into at Curri's this week... A three-in-one product that is wonderfully softening and perfuming to the skin.

It's kind of hard to describe unless I start at the beginning... So here goes:

"Triple Check Household Lotion" is the name... When you put it on your hands it softens the skin, perfumes them and kills thousands of bacteria that always lurk there... It's wonderful as a powder base... As an after-shave lotion... To provide relief from sunburn, chafing, etc.

I suppose you, like me, have always thought of germicides as having a decidedly germ-killing odor... Well, Triple Check Lotion doesn't... It's fragrance is delightful... And if it hadn't been for laboratory and clinic tests which showed up its wonderful germicidal strength, you'd never guess it could do that kind of work.

Triple Check Lotion comes in a clever felt-and-leather bag for use in traveling... You can use it after the bottle is empty.

And not only is it new, but Curri's has it exclusively... Something they're very proud of, because such a product is placed on sale only in stores that have the highest reputation.

Of course, Triple Check Lotion costs a little more than an ordinary, simple hand lotion... But why not?... It does so much more!... A six-ounce bottle costs $1.50 and a pint bottle is $3.00.

At Curri's.

Gas Rationing

LAST week-end I talked with a man who has been living on the Atlantic coast for a couple of years... And we got on the subject of gas rationing... He has an "A" card, which most people have... And I asked him what the effect was on his automobile driving.

"I told me that he and his wife keep the car in the garage almost all of the time... They occasionally bum rides, but mostly take the bus or walk... (And, incidentally, his wife has reduced her hip measurement by two inches!)

They go without their car in the daytime... Just forget about it... And use it only for entertainment purposes in the evening or for driving out to a country inn for Sunday dinner.

"I suppose you would save yours for Saturday nights," he told me.

"Why?" I asked.

"So you could go to Cal-Ore," he answered.

He said that it's a lot easier to make the sacrifices in connection with your work or usual duties... And have your car for the pleasure it can give you.

"It helps keep up your morale," is the way he put it.

Garcelon's

WELL, there's a big stock of floor lamps at Garcelon's right now... But if you're planning on getting new ones for Christmas you'd better not wait too long.

Because this present stock of floor lamps is the last Garcelon's will have!

These are lovely lamps, however... They were bought early, so they're better quality than those purchased later... If you know what I mean... Better finish and a wider selection of styles.

So if you're in the market for a floor lamp you'd better get busy right now... You'll find the price range from $14.95 to $26.50, for the lamps complete with shades and globes... And you have a choice of shades, too!

At Garcelon's.

Studio of Beauty

PERN SHORT tells me that the hairpin and bobby pin situation really is critical in beauty shops... She says that I have no idea of the tremendous amount of pins they buy and use... And I didn't, before she told me.

Well, there's a shortage of all kinds of pins... And if she and the girls who work there leave the Studio of Beauty's pins in my hair, then maybe the next time I want to get pin-curls there won't be enough hair pins to do them... Or someone else may suffer.

So now I'll be careful to bring my own hair pins.

While I was there I ran into a friend of mine who is being married the end of this week... A war bride who had only two weeks' advance notice before the wedding... And she was very busy getting rid of her Summer tan.

She told me that she simply couldn't wear a tan with a filmy white gown and look like a real bride... So she was following a schedule suggested by the Helene Rubinstein experts... It's interesting and timely, so I jotted it down.

During the day she uses Pasturized Whitening Cream to cleanse her skin... Wake-Up Cream in the morning; and she leaves it on at least 20 minutes... Then Wake-Up Cream again in the evening for 20 minutes before going to bed.

Twice a week she is giving her skin an Herbal Masque treatment to improve its tone... And just before she steps up to the altar she is supposed to use the Herbal Masque again so her complexion will be glowing and radiant.

Even in the week she had followed this schedule she had noticed decided improvement, she told me.
